THE SOCIETY

OF

Sons of the American Revolution.

Character and Origin of the Society.

THE SOCIETY OF SONS OF THE AMERICAN REVOLUTION is a National organization composed of State societies in the several States and Territories of the Union. Its membership consists of lineal descendants of the patriots, who, by their services and sacrifices in the war of the Revolution, achieved American independence. Among its members are to be found the most eminent and honored men of the present day in all the ranks and callings of life. And its rolls prove the fact, which is a matter of pride to the society, that the characteristics and endowments for which the men of that distinguished generation are honored and beloved did not perish with them, but have been transmitted to the generations of their posterity, and are yet influential and useful in promoting the welfare of our country.

The Society is the outgrowth of the public celebrations which took place in every part of the United States, beginning in 1876, of the 100th anniversary of prominent events of the American Revolution. The first State Society was proposed at a meeting held in San Francisco, Cal., in October, 1875, and was actually organized there, July 4, 1876. A large number of Societies were formed in other States in subsequent years. The National Society was organized by representatives of the various State Societies, at a meeting held in New York city, April 30, 1889, the 100th anniversary of the inauguration of Washington as first President of the United States, and during the great public celebration of that event. The meeting was held in the identical "long room" in Fraunce's Tavern, still in existence, in which Washington bade farewell to his officers at the close of the Revolution.

OBJECT.

The organization is purely patriotic and social. In no respect is it partisan, political or commercial. The members are united by a bond of patriotic and fraternal sentiment. The objects of the Society are to perpetuate the memory of the men, who, by their services or sacrifices during the War of the American Revolution, achieved the independence of the American people; to unite and promote fellowship among their descendants; to inspire them and the community at large with a more profound reverence for the principles of the government founded by our forefathers; to encourage historical research in relation to the American Revolution; to acquire and preserve the records of the individual services of the patriots of the war, as well as documents, relics and landmarks; to mark the scenes of the Revolution by appropriate memorials; to celebrate the anniversaries of the prominent events of the war; to foster true patriotism; to maintain and extend the institution of American freedom, and to carry out the purposes expressed in the Preamble to the Constitution of our Country and the injunctions of Washington in his farewell address to the American people.

REQUISITES FOR MEMBERSHIP.

THE APPLICANT must be of lawful age.

DESCENT from Revolutionary ancestor must be LINEAL, but it may be on either paternal or maternal lines, and the ancestor need not have resided in Pennsylvania, nor need his services have been rendered in Pennsylvania.

ELIGIBILITY is based on services rendered in the cause of American Independence, either as a soldier, seaman, civil officer or recognized patriot, in the Revolutionary War.

THE APPLICANT must file his application IN DUPLICATE on the blanks furnished by the Society, and must make affidavit to the statement therein contained, and should cite in the application the authorities relied upon to prove the services of his ancestor.

AUTHORITIES to prove services must be recognized historical works, public reports, documents, etc. A certificate from the "Record and Pension Office of the U. S. War Department," which can always be obtained on application if the ancestor's services are recorded there, is always sufficient proof. Proof by any evidence not of such public character can be held sufficient only in exceptional cases and under severe scrutiny.

THE ACCEPTABILITY of the applicant must be attested by the endorsement of his application by two members of the Society, and by a personal letter of recommendation from at least one of the endorsing members.

APPLICATIONS may be sent either to the Registrar or the Secretary of the Society.

FEES AND DUES. The initiation fee is $5.00. The National Society's Certificate of Membership, handsomely engraved and engrossed, which is furnished to each member, costs $1.50. These charges are to be paid in advance on the filing of an application for membership, and will be returned if the application is not approved. Annual dues are $3.00 per year, and in case of new members are apportioned at the rate of 25 cents per month, for the remainder of the current year, which ends on the 22d of February.

Pennsylvania Society.

Constitution.

ARTICLE I.

NAME.

The name of this Society shall be the Pennsylvania Society of the Sons of the American Revolution.

ARTICLE II.

OBJECT.

The objects of the Society shall be: To keep alive the patriotic spirit and perpetuate the memory of the men who, in military, naval or civil service, by their acts or counsel, achieved American Independence.

To collect and preserve the records, memorials, traditions and relics relating to the War of the Revolution, and to promote social intercourse and good feeling among its members now and hereafter, and to cherish, maintain and extend the institutions of American freedom, and to foster true patriotism and love of country among all our people.

ARTICLE III.

MEMBERSHIP.

Any man is eligible for membership who, being the age of twenty-one years or over, is lineally descended from an ancestor who, with unflinching loyalty, rendered material aid to the cause of American Independence as a soldier or a seaman, or a civil officer in one of the several Colonies or States, or of the United Colonies or States, or as a recognized patriot, provided that the applicant shall be acceptable to the Society.

ARTICLE IV.

OFFICERS AND MANAGERS.

The officers of the Society shall be a President, one or more Vice Presidents, a Secretary, a Treasurer, a Registrar, a Historian, and such others as may be deemed necessary, who shall be elected by a vote of the majority of the members present at the annual meeting of the Society, and who shall hold office for one year, or until their successors shall be elected, and who, with seven other members, shall constitute the Board of Management.

Delegates to the Congress of the Society shall be elected at each annual meeting, in accordance with the requirements of the Constitution of the General Society.

AN Executive Committee of five, of which the President of the Society shall be the chairman, the other members of which may be appointed by the President from the Board of Management, shall, in the interim between the meetings of the Board, transact such business as shall be delegated to it by the Board of Management.

ARTICLE V.

FEEs AND DUES.

1. The initiation fee shall be five ($5.00) dollars; the annual dues three ($3.00) dollars, or the payment at one time of fifty ($50.00) dollars shall constitute a life member, with exemption from payment of dues thereafter. When a member is elected after the annual meeting his dues for the remainder of that year shall be at the rate of twenty-five (25) cents per month.

2. The annual dues shall be payable in advance on the twenty-second day of February in each year.

3. A member who shall remain in arrears for dues for three months after notice of his indebtedness has been sent him, may be dropped from the rolls by the Board of Management.

4. The receipts each year from initiation fees, life-membership fees and dues, constituting the aggregate annual resources of the Society, shall be devoted by the Board of Management to the following objects, and no other, viz.:

First. Payment of the annual dues to the National Society.

Second. Payment of current expenses.

Third. Publication of such documents as may be deemed advisable.

Fourth. Payment of such special expenses as may be authorized by the vote of two-thirds of the Board of Management.

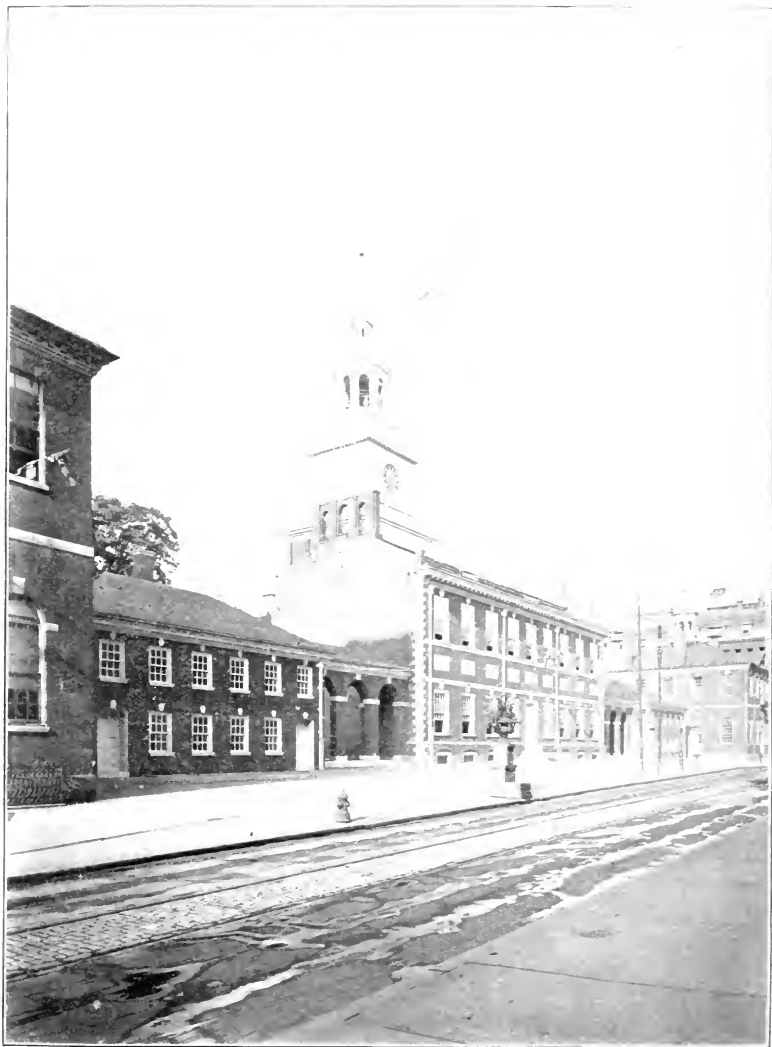

ARTICLE VI.

MEETINGS AND ELECTIONS.

1. The Annual Meeting, for election of officers and transaction of business, shall be held at such hour as shall be designated by the Board of Managers, on the twenty-second day of February—the anniversary of the birth of George Washington—in every year, except when that date shall fall on Sunday, in which case the meeting shall be held on the following day.

2. Special meetings may be called by the President of the Board of Management at any time for business purposes or for the purpose of celebrating events of the Revolution or other patriotic events, or devising means for the prosecution of patriotic work. The President shall call a special meeting whenever requested, in writing, so to do by five or more members.

3. General business may be transacted at any special meeting.

INDEPENDENCE HALL, PHILADELPHIA, PA.

4. Seven members shall constitute a quorum at all meetings, except that three members shall be a quorum of the Executive Committee.

5. All nominations for officers shall be made from the floor, and not by committee, and all elections to office shall be by ballot. The persons receiving the majority of all the votes cast shall be declared elected, and shall hold office for the ensuing term and until their successors shall be elected.

ARTICLE VII.

AMENDMENTS.

Amendments to this Constitution may be offered at any meeting of the Society, but shall not be acted on until the next meeting. A copy of every proposed amendment shall be sent to each member, with a notice of the meeting at which the same is to be acted on, at least one week prior to said meeting.

A vote of two-thirds of those present shall be necessary to the adoption of any amendment.

ARTICLE VIII.

LOCAL CHAPTERS.

1. Upon the petition of five or more members residing in the same locality, the Board of Managers may, at its discretion, authorize the formation of a local Chapter, to be known as "The —— Chapter of the Pennsylvania Society of the Sons of the American Revolution." Such Chapter may enact such By-Laws and Regulations as do not conflict with the Constitution or By-Laws of the National or State Society. No member shall be admitted to any such Chapter who is not a member of the Pennsylvania Society of the Sons of the American Revolution, and a resident of such district contiguous to the seat of said Chapter as shall be indicated by the Board of Managers. Any member who shall be suspended, expelled, or in any way lose membership in the State Society, shall thereupon cease to be a member of such Chapter. The President of each Chapter shall be, ex-officio, a member of the Board of Managers of the said Society; but in case of his inability to attend any meeting of the Board of Managers, he may delegate some other member of his Chapter then to act for and in his behalf, which said member shall, for the purpose of said meeting, be an ex-officio member of the said Board of Managers. There may, at the option of the Board of Managers, be two or more Chapters in any County.

2. No application for membership in the State Society, from any person residing within the jurisdiction of any Chapter, shall be acted upon by the Board of Managers of the State Society until it has been referred to the officers of such Chapter and recommended by them. But if they refuse to recommend the applicant, the Board of Managers of the State Society may approve the application if they see proper so to do; but the applicant shall not thereby become a member of such Chapter.

3. After the organization of a local Chapter the State Society will remit to said Chapter two-thirds of the annual dues paid by members of said Chapter.

By-Laws.

SECTION I.

ELECTION OF MEMBERS.

Members shall be elected as follows : Candidates may send their applications, together with documents with other proofs of qualification for membership,* to the Secretary ; and, upon a favorable report from the Board of Management, and upon payment of the initiation fee, shall become members of the Society.

SECTION II.

THE PRESIDENT.

The President, or, in his absence, the Vice President, or, in his absence, a Chairman pro-tempore, shall preside at all meetings of the Society and Board of Management, and have a casting vote. He shall exercise the usual functions of a presiding officer, and shall enforce a strict observance of the Constitution and By-Laws of the regulations and rules of the Society.

SECTION III.

THE SECRETARY.

The Secretary shall conduct the general correspondence of the Society, and such other matters as may be directed by the Society. He shall have charge of the seal, certificate of incorporation, by-laws and records of the Society, and, together with the presiding officer, shall certify all acts of the Society.

He shall keep fair and accurate records of all the proceedings and orders of the Society, and shall give notice to the several officers of all

* It is required that all applications shall be made upon the standard form of Application for Membership, issued by authority of the Executive Committee, N. S., S. A. E., which provides for :

1. A statement of the services of the ancestor of the applicant in aid of the establishment of American Independence.
2. A detailed statement of the intermediate generations of his pedigree, with full names of maternal and paternal ancestors in each generation, and, if possible, dates and places of birth and death, and places of residence.
3. A recommendation of the candidate by two members of the Society, and a letter from one of the recommending members.
4. An affidavit by the applicant in support of the statements contained in his application.

votes, orders, resolves and proceedings of the Society affecting them or appertaining to their respective duties.

He shall notify all members of their election, and shall, under the direction of the President or Vice President, give due notice of the time and place of all meetings of the Society, and attend the same.

SECTION IV.

THE TREASURER.

The Treasurer shall collect and keep the funds and securities of the Society; they shall be deposited in some bank or saving institute in this city, to the credit of The Pennsylvania Society of the Sons of the American Revolution, and shall be drawn thence on the check of the Treasurer, for the purposes of the Society only. Out of these funds he shall pay such sums only as may be ordered by the Society, or by the Board of Management.

He shall keep a true account of his receipts and payments, and, at each annual meeting, render the same to the Society, when a committee shall be appointed to audit his accounts.

If, from the annual report of the Treasurer, there shall appear to be a balance against the Treasurer, no appropriation of money shall be made for any object but the necessary current expenses of the Society until such balance be paid.

SECTION V.

THE REGISTRAR.

The Registrar shall keep a roll of members, and in his hands shall be lodged all the proofs of membership, qualification, and all the historical and genealogical papers, manuscript or other, of which the Society may become possessed; and, under the direction of the Board of Management, shall keep copies of such similar documents as the owners thereof may not be willing to leave permanently in the keeping of the Society. He shall verify all statements of the revolutionary services of ancestors that may be made in the applications for membership, and make report to the Board of Managers.

SECTION VI.

THE HISTORIAN.

The Historian shall keep the records of the historical and commemorative meetings of the Society, and shall supervise the preparation and printing of all its historical publications, other than those of the membership rolls.

He shall submit, at each annual meeting, a list of the members who may have died during the year, accompanied by biographical memoirs.

Historical Sketch

Pennsylvania Society, Sons of the American Revolution.

THE National Society of Sons of the American Revolution was organized in the year 1889. At that time there was a considerable Society of Revolutionary descendants existing in the eastern part of the State, but, in the misguided division of sentiment which developed at the time of the attempt, in that year, to organize a national society of such descendants, that society cast its lot with the faction which afterwards developed into the General Society of Sons of the Revolution. The sentiment of Pennsylvania was, however, by no means all in favor of that decision, and, there being no State Society of Sons of the American Revolution in Pennsylvania, many of those who desired to enter that organization, most of them resident in the western part of the State, became members of the District of Columbia Society, Sons of the American Revolution. In 1892 the number of members residing in and about Pittsburgh was such that they began to feel the desire for a local organization, and during that year steps began to be taken toward that end. Several meetings were had, and a committee was appointed to promote the enterprise, with the full approval and co-operation of the District of Columbia Society. In these preliminary efforts Maj. Howard Morton and Col. William A. Herron were the prime movers, and were enthusiastic and untiring.

In the autumn of the year 1893 the movement was perfected, and at a meeting, held at Col. Herron's residence, in Pittsburgh, the society was formally organized with twenty-five members; a constitution was adopted, officers elected, and an application was made to the National Society of S. A. R. for its approval of this as the Pennsylvania Society of that organization, which approval was promptly and cordially given.

The first annual meeting and banquet of the Society on February 22nd, 1894, was an occasion of great interest to our infant organization. It was held at the Duquesne Club, Pittsburgh, and was signalized by a number of notable features. Maj. Howard Morton, the First Vice President, presided. Col. Albert J. Logan was toast-master. The speakers and their subjects were as follows: Gen. A. W. Greely, "The Sons of the American Revolution;" Rev. W. A. Stanton, D.D., "By-Ways of the American Revolution;" Dr. Hugh Hamilton, "The Duty We Owe Posterity;" Hon. Joseph D. Weeks, "The Spirit of '76."

The principal address was that of Gen. Greely—the distinguished Arctic explorer, and Chief of the U. S. Signal Service, who, as Chairman of the Committee on Advancement of the National Society of Sons of the American Revolution, represented that Society, on this, the occasion of our State Society's first appearance before the public. His excellent speech is printed in full at the latter part of this volume.

The menu for this Banquet was printed on parchment paper, which itself was a relic of Revolutionary days, being, according to tradition, some of the remnants of a cargo of such paper which, at the outbreak of hostilities in that war, was seized by the colonists in the harbor of Philadelphia. This menu was adorned with a beautiful steel engraved portrait of Washington, from Col. Trumbull's portrait.

At the same hour that our Society was banqueting for the first time together, the Society of the Loyal Legion was also banqueting in another room of the same house; they very courteously sent to us a committee, bearing congratulatory hopes for the welfare of our new-born society, from their kindred hereditary patriotic organization. This compliment was highly appreciated and a committee from our Society returned our thanks and greetings. Many of those who participated in that first gathering have passed into that life in which no note of anniversaries is kept ; where time has ceased to be ; but those of us who remain cherish the memories of that occasion, with those of the compatriots who sat with us at that table ; and the interesting souvenir menus are among our most highly prized relics.

Its career, thus happily begun, the Society grew in membership and influence steadily, but rather slowly, for a number of years. But in the years 1900 and 1901, owing to the meeting of the National Congress at Pittsburgh in 1901, and to the more vigorous efforts which the approach of that event called forth, great accessions were made in the Society, from which it is still receiving benefit. As must be expected in the case of any such society, ours has frequently been called to mourn for the loss, by death, of esteemed and useful members ; others have resigned, or been dismissed to other State Societies ; and some have been dropped from the rolls for failure to comply with the conditions of membership.

The statistics in respect to membership, to November 1st., 1903, are as follows :

Number of charter members.....	25
Elected since organization.....	423
Total enrollment.....	448
Losses by death	21
Other losses, by dismission, etc.....	21
Total active members enrolled.....	406

A review of the work done by the Society along the lines of its avowed objects during the ten years of its existence is confined by the limits of the space allowed for this article, to a rather meager outline ; though, in some features, it is expanded elsewhere in this volume.

The fact that the field of operations of the Society has been, for the most part, confined to the western part of the State, has prevented the accomplishment of much work in the line of marking sites or collecting documents or other mementos of the Revolutionary War.

One of the important objects of our association has, however, been very carefully and intelligently carried out. The registry of membership of our Society, from the beginning of the Society's existence, has been made up by most careful selection. We are satisfied that no person is enrolled thereon whose eligibility and qualifications in all respects will not bear the closest and most critical inspection. The papers thus filed by members form a most valuable and interesting collection of historical and genealogical material and are carefully preserved. With the roll of membership, in this volume, brief, but comprehensive, abstracts of these papers are printed, and indicate the character and value of the matter thus collected and preserved.

The Society has always taken its part in patriotic and civic activities in the community; in which connection mention may be made of the annual exercises for the children of the public schools, on the occasions of Memorial Day and Flag Day, which are conducted under the auspices of the Grand Army of the Republic, but in which our Society has been regularly participating for some years, in conjunction with the G. A. R. Associations.

Our New Castle chapter deserves especial mention for the campaign of patriotic education which it has been conducting among the school children, in connection with the marking of graves of Revolutionary Soldiers, in that chapter's territory, which graves, when marked, are placed under the care of the children attending the schools nearest to them.

The Society has consistently advocated the promotion of the spirit of respect for the National Flag, and has repeatedly taken measures to secure the observance of existing laws in relation thereto.

The action taken in the matter of securing custody of the cannon, trophies of the War for Independence—which were about to be removed from the Arsenal at Pittsburgh—is described in detail at another place in this volume; and the same is true with respect to the ceremonies attending the removal of the remains of Revolutionary soldiers from the grave-yard of the First Presbyterian Church at Pittsburgh. Both of these occasions were important and interesting, and fully in conformity with the spirit and purposes of the Society.

The annual observance of Washington's Birthday, by the meeting of the Society on that day, followed by a banquet in the evening, has been the only regular observance of days or events of Revolutionary history which has been attempted. These occasions have always been very profitable and agreeable to the members who have attended, and a number of very able and valuable addresses have been made by members of the Society, and by others invited to be present at these times.

The most notable feature of the social life of the organization was, undoubtedly, the entertainment of the National Congress at Pittsburgh in the year 1901. It required great faith and courage on the part of the members of the Society in 1900 to extend the invitation to the Congress to hold its next session here. The amount of effort and expense involved were well understood, and recognized as a heavy load for a Society, so small as ours then was, to assume. But the spirit of hospitality was strong among us, and the invitation was given and accepted most cordially. The result justified the confidence which had inspired the effort. It was a great gratification to us all to entertain our visiting compatriots; that our efforts in that behalf were satisfactory to our guests was shown in numerous unmistakable ways. The kindly assistance of our sisters, the Daughters of the American Revolution, on that occasion, deserves especial mention. Much of the interest of several features of our entertainment resulted from their presence and good offices. A full report of the proceedings of that Congress was printed in the Year Book of the National Society for that year, copies of which were procured by our State Society and distributed to all members.

We have accumulated a very good working library of books on historical and genealogical subjects, with special relation to Revolutionary and Colonial days. This library is under the care of a special committee, and is kept in the custody of the Registrar, and is open to all members, and to others interested in the Society.

There is now in progress an effort to locate the burial places of the ancestors of members of the Society, and of other Revolutionary soldiers and patriots throughout the State, for the purpose of making an accurate and permanent record thereof, which, when completed, will be of great historical value. This work is in charge of the Historian of the Society, and in it he should have the hearty co-operation of all members.

Another line of effort which is being taken up is an attempt toward some form of education in patriotism and the duties of citizenship among the throngs of immigrants from other lands who have settled within the borders of Pennsylvania, and whose ignorance of our institutions and history, and of the principles of government which prevail among us, renders them unfit for the duties and privileges of citizenship. This matter is now in the hands of a special committee, and the National Society is also moving in the same direction. Without doubt good results will be obtained in the future, though it will, necessarily, be a work of time.

This Society has now reached a position, in numbers and influence, where it can accomplish worthy and creditable results in any lines of patriotic endeavor which it may take up, but the extent of its accomplishment will be limited by the degree of personal interest taken in it and its work, by the individual members. The general interest of the community in all matters such as are included in the peculiar objects and purposes of our Society, is much greater and more active than it was when we were organized, ten years ago, chiefly because of the organization and activity of our and other kindred societies. We have the privilege and opportunity of leading the public sentiment and action along all such lines. Pennsylvania affords a rich field for such effort, and we believe that our Society will not fall short of its opportunity, and that, during the next ten years of its existence, substantial and creditable results of our work will be witnessed.

New Castle Chapter, S. A. R.

HIS was the second chapter organized in the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania. The first meeting was held April 5th, 1900, with the following compatriots enrolled as charter members:

Jonathan Smith DuShane,	Richard C. Clarke,
William A. Stritmeater,	Clare Phillips DuShane,
Charles Pearson Shaw,	Harry Knight Gregory.

The growth of the chapter has been steady, its membership having increased since its organization from six to forty-five. In view of the fact that Lawrence County, in which the chapter is located, does not contain a large population, its growth must be considered satisfactory.

The active work of the chapter has been along practical lines. Through the courtesy of Compatriot Robert G. Allen, Superintendent of Common Schools of the county, a period was allotted to the chapter at the last Teachers' Institute, at which time Compatriots Samuel W. Dana and Jonathan S. DuShane presented the work of the society to the teachers of the county; each teacher was requested to have his pupils care for each Revolutionary patriot's grave that may be located in the school district, and the names of the Revolutionary patriots and the location of the graves were given, wherever possible. Subsequently several of the schools in the vicinities of these graves were visited by some of the compatriots and considerable interest awakened among the school children in this matter. It has resulted in many patriots' graves now being carefully marked and cared for that hitherto had been neglected.

The chapter has, upon all possible occasions, kept its work prominently before the public through the medium of the press, the New Castle papers very considerably offering their columns for this purpose.

At each annual meeting a banquet has been given, and other social meetings held from time to time.

At the last annual meeting, held January 8th, 1903, officers were elected for the current year, as follows:

President.....	Samuel W. Dana
Vice President.....	Robert G. Allen
Secretary.....	Harry Knight Gregory
Treasurer.....	Charles Pearson Shaw
Registrar.....	Jouathian Smith DuShane

Proceedings of the Annual Meeting

of the

Pennsylvania Society of Sons of the American Revolution at Pittsburgh, February 23d, 1903.

MINUTES.

PITTSBURGH, PA., February 23d, 1903.

THE annual meeting of the Society of Sons of the American Revolution was held at the Pittsburg Club this evening, at six o'clock, President W. L. Jones in the chair.

In the absence of the Secretary, the chair appointed S. E. Gill, Secretary pro tem.

At the opening of the meeting thirty members were present, which number was increased to about eighty before the close of the meeting. The reading of the minutes of the previous meeting was, on motion, dispensed with, there being no unfinished business.

The President read his Annual Report, and on motion the same was ordered to be received and, with slight corrections, to be filed.

The report of the Registrar, after being read, was also, on motion, received and filed.

The report of the Historian was next read, and, on motion, was ordered to be received and filed, as was also the report of the Librarian.

A motion was then made that a committee of three be appointed to nominate officers to serve for the ensuing year. This being unanimously agreed to, Compatriots Logan, Oursler and

NATIONAL CONGRESS OF THE S. A. R., HELD AT

EL SCHENLEY, PITTSBURGH, PA., MAY 1, 1901.

Hubleby were appointed. The committee having retired to deliberate, returned to the meeting and reported nominations. The Society then proceeded to the election of officers for the ensuing year. (The result of said election is shown in this Year Book.)

On motion the Society unanimously and heartily resolved to present the name of Compatriot James Denton Hancock to the National Congress at its next meeting, as Pennsylvania's candidate for the position of President General of the National Society.

No other business appearing, Compatriot Guthrie announced that dinner was ready, whereupon the meeting adjourned and repaired to the banquet hall, where a very pleasant evening was spent, short addresses being made by Compatriots Stanton, Hall, Neale, Horne, Harper and Gill, with Compatriot Guthrie acting as toast-master.

S. E. GILL, Secretary pro tem.

Reports Presented at the Annual Meeting, 1903.

Report of the Board of Management.

THE Board of Management of the Pennsylvania Society of Sons of the American Revolution herewith submits a summary of the things done, or attempted, by the Society during the past year.

I. The War Department, having decided to dismantle the Arsenal at Pittsburgh, ordered certain Revolutionary trophies transferred to the Watervliet Arsenal in New York. Among these trophies were brass cannon, captured at Saratoga and elsewhere, which had been in Pittsburgh probably for a hundred years.

Your Society immediately took steps to secure the custody of these guns. The War Department, having been applied to, refused our request.

This was the situation—The order for immediate removal was imperative. Our Congressman was lost in the Adirondacks. Our Senator was in Florida. Mr. George Oliver telegraphed to Senator Quay in Florida for assistance, and the Senator wired the War Dept. to postpone the removal,—another friend forwarded a letter to Postmaster General Smith, asking his influence, and he also visited the War Dept. asking for and securing a postponement.

Then Hon. John Dalzell, our Representative in Congress, by his personal influence, secured the unanimous adoption by the House of Representatives and Senate, of a joint resolution "loaning one four-pound bronze gun—French; two three-pound bronze guns—English; four six-pound bronze guns, English, to the Penna. Society S. A. R.," which resolution was approved by the President, March 12, 1902.

These guns are more fully described as follows, viz:

One three-pounder bronze, inscribed "Surrendered by the Convention of Saratoga Oct. 17, 1777, (incised), also "1 & P. Verbraggen Fecerunt, 1776," in relief around the breech. Also one three-pounder bronze—mate of above—same maker—1775—(surrendered at same time). Also two six-pounders (bronze), with the English Crown and "2 G. R." (in monogram), all in relief on top of gun,—also "L" encircled, with motto "Tria juncta in uno," in relief below same, and a rose and shamrock and thistle, incised at muzzle; also, "W. Bowen, fecit, 1755," in relief around the breech. Also two six-pounder bronze guns with "3 G. R." (in monogram), English Crown and "L," in relief on top, and "W. Bowen, fecit, 1761," in relief around the breech. Also one four-pounder French (bronze), with "Derier Freres Paris," incised on end of the breech. Also one six-pounder bronze gun with no inscription. At the War Department at Washington there are guns of similar description, made by W. Bowen and inscribed "surrendered by the convention of Saratoga Oct. 17, 1777,"—and five of these guns answer to description of certain guns provided for Burgoyne's Expedition, as contained in Burgoyne's defense before the English House of Commons.

The six-pounders weigh about 600 pounds each—the four-pounders 500 pounds, and the three-pounders about 200 pounds each.

In Carnegie Music Hall, on the evening of May 23, 1892, your Board of Management, surrounded by the staff and line officers of the 18th Regiment, Pennsylvania Volunteers, and of Battery B, and Col. Bope's Company, Boys' Brigade, in full dress, and with their regimental and company colors, formally received these guns from Hon. John Dalzell (a). Col. Harry Alvan Hall (b) responded for the Society, and transferred them to the custody of Rev. W. J. Holland, LL. D., (c), director of the Carnegie Museum. They now occupy the most prominent position at the main entrance of the Carnegie Library.

On one of our visits to the Arsenal, we found four historic guns weighing eight tons each—the last remaining of those which John B. Floyd, then Secretary of War, ordered to be shipped on the Steamer Silver Wave, to New Orleans, in Deember, 1860. His action called forth a great outburst of patriotic indignation from the entire city; so great that after the guns surrounded by soldiers, had been hauled to the Monongahela wharf, the order was countermanded, and they were returned to the Arsenal. Hundreds of obsolete cannon and thousands of shot and shell had been sold at public auction; these four were all that remained, and they were owned by the Westinghouse Machine Company. At our suggestion, Mr. Westinghouse presented these four cannon to the city of Pittsburgh, They were taken, two to Schenley Park, and two to Highland Park, where they still remain unmolested.

(a) See p. 56. (b) Unable to secure ms. (c) See p. 66.

II. Our Society sent representatives to the Park and the Public Schools, on "Flag Day."

III. Learning that the Declaration of Independence would be read, at the public reception to President Roosevelt in Schenley Park, July 4th, we suggested to the committee in charge, that as our society represented the men who wrote and published that document, it would be eminently proper to have us furnish a person to read it, and, by request, Compatriot Gen. Willis J. Hulings memorized it, and electrified the vast audience by his magnificent delivery of it.

That same evening our Society colors, with the President's personal flag (then used for the first time), were the sole decorations at the dinner given to the President by Attorney General Knox.

IV. We have, at different times, warned the public by letter, and through the newspapers, against the misuse or abuse of the flag, and in one case invoked the law against the offenders.

Just previous to the 4th of July, a very large poster, in the form of an American flag, was displayed throughout the city of Pittsburgh, for the purpose of advertising the business of one of the large retail establishments. On the first day of July your president wrote to the advertiser and called attention to the law on the subject, stating that this poster seemed to be a violation of both its letter and spirit. Thereupon the advertiser very courteously and promptly replied, with thanks for having attention called to the matter, stating that it should be remedied at once. That was done, and the next day found each poster completely covered by a sheet of white paper.

V. The Pittsburgh Gazette of November 8th, contained the following: "Freeport, Pa., Nov. 7.—Hallowe'en jokes generally go, but about 20 youths, between the ages of 12 and 18, have got themselves into the clutches of the law, and what they thought to be a joke may turn out very costly. Hallowe'en a crowd of boys proceeded to Louisville School House, South Buffalo Township, Armstrong County, broke into the building and destroyed the contents. They first tore down the American flag and decorated themselves with sashes from it. They destroyed a new chart, costing $40.00, broke up the chairs and desks, emptied all the ink, broke in the windows and filled them full of fence rails. The school had to suspend for a time, until it could be put into shape. The School Directors went before Justice J. M. Boyd, made information against the boys, and Officer John Duff notified their parents to appear last night before the Squire and enter bail, which they did, for a hearing next week. It is alleged that several girls were participants in the mischief."

At our suggestion Judge James B. Neale, of Kittanning, engaged Attorney Rush Fullerton to appear for our Society at the hearing before Justice Boyd. The Justice and our attorney are descended from the same Revolutionary ancestor, and have a warm sympathy for our Society.

The boys' parents paid all damages and costs; also, paid the Order of American Mechanics for a new flag, in place of the original which had been presented by them. And it is presumed that the parents and boys had the usual conference in the wood-shed, made and provided for such occasions.

VI. The headquarters of our Society being west of the mountains, where no revolutionary battles were fought, we have no battle-fields to mark. As we establish chapters to the eastward our progress will doubtless be traced by monuments and markers. But Pennsylvania's dead were scattered from Saratoga to Yorktown, as our men were being led by Wayne and Butler, from the former place to the latter.

Col. Richard Butler, of Pittsburgh, was the rival in valor of Daniel Morgan at Saratoga, and of Anthony Wayne at Stony Point, and his ensign, young Ebenezer Denny, was chosen to plant our flag over Yorktown. General Steuben, thinking Denny too young for such a service, snatched the flag from his hands, and for this act received a challenge from Butler, and it required the united effort of Washington and Rochambeau to keep these two fighters from killing each other. Butler was killed at "St. Clair's Defeat;" his body was not recovered. We held a memorial service to his memory October 23d, 1902, in the First Presbyterian Church, Pittsburgh.

The service was brought about in this manner:

The First Presbyterian Church, incorporated in 1787, having among its eleven incorporators and trustees nine who had "served in the American Revolution," found itself, one hundred and fifteen years later, with a property enormously increased in value, and a membership decreasing in numbers. They sold their Wood street frontage—sixty feet in depth, all they could legally sell—and leased, for a term of 999 years, an additional fifty feet in the rear, intending to tear down the existing church and build a new one in the space now used as a graveyard. This required the removal of the remains of all who were still in the burying ground. Of the many Revolutionary soldiers originally interred therein, some had been removed at various times in former years, and a few still remain. The burial records have been lost or destroyed. Many of the gravestones have disappeared, and on others the inscriptions have become illegible.

Our Society determined that no irreverent hand should disturb our sacred dead, and, with the consent and approval of the descendants of these soldiers, arranged to have them taken up and re-interred in the "Allegheny Cemetery," and to hold a memorial and military service for all soldiers of the American Revolution who had ever been connected with the church, or buried in its graveyard. Three of them we could find, General John Neville, Major Isaac Craig and Col. James Johnston. Three more could not be found, Col. Stephen Bayard, Captain John Guthrie, and his brother, Robert Guthrie. A memorial and military burial service was held on the afternoon of October 23d, 1902, in the First Presbyterian Church, of Wood Street, Pittsburgh, over the following soldiers :

COL. STEPHEN BAYARD, of Third Pennsylvania Regiment. Incorporator, Trustee and Elder of church.

MAJOR ISAAC CRAIG, of Proctor's Artillery. Incorporator, Trustee and Elder of church.

COL. RICHARD BUTLER, ———. Incorporator, Trustee and Elder of church.

- MAJOR EBENEZER DENNY, of Col. Butler's Regiment. Trustee, and first Mayor of Pittsburgh.
- COL. JOHN GIBSON, Thirteenth, Ninth and Seventh Virginia Regiments. Incorporator and Trustee of church.
- CAPT. JOHN GUTHRIE, under Gens. Armstrong and Lacy.
- ROBERT GUTHRIE, " " "
- CAPT. JOHN IRWIN, First Continental Infantry and Second Pennsylvania; wounded at Paoli.
- ENSIGN JAMES JOHNSTON, Ninth Pennsylvania, commanded by his brother.
- GEN. JOHN NEVILLE, Colonel Twelfth, Eighth and Fourth, Virginia line.
- GEN. JAMES O'HARA, Quartermaster General. Trustee of church.
- MAJOR ADAMSON TANNEHILL, Rowling's and Continental Regiments. Incorporator and Trustee.
- GEORGE WALLACE, First President Judge of Allegheny County. Incorporator and Trustee.
- COL. JOHN WILKINS, SR., Col. Spencer's Regiment. Incorporator, Trustee and Elder.
- GEN. JOHN WILKINS, JR., Quartermaster General, U. S. A., Trustee of church.

Also, over remains of Winifred Oldham, wife of General John Neville. Her six brothers were officers of the Revolution; one killed at Entaw Springs, another killed at St. Clair's Defeat. She married an officer; her sister married Major Abraham Kirkpatrick—her only daughter married Major Isaac Craig—her only son was Col. Pressly Neville, of Lafayette's staff. And, because of her family record, it was decided that she also was entitled to a military funeral. Our sisters of the D. A. R. were asked to take charge of this part of the service, and they selected Rev. Dr. Matthew B. Riddle (a) as their representative.

Rev. Dr. Maitland Alexander, (b) as pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, had entire charge of the service. Rev. Dr. Richard S. Holmes, (c) Chaplain of S. A. R. conducted the service over these soldiers who were re-interred.

(a) See p. 51. (b) See p. 84. (c) See p. 70.

In front of the pulpit were the four caskets, draped in the national colors, and guarded by soldiers. Descendants of these revolutionary heroes filled the pews.

At the end of a beautiful and solemn service, "taps" were sounded for those who had been removed in former years, and for those who could not be found. The caskets were carried upon the shoulders of the soldiers down the aisle. The remains of Col. Johnston's son and his wife, who had also lain in the graveyard awaited us outside. The unusual sight of six hearses, drawn through the streets, attracted much attention, and many uncovered as the cortege passed. At the Allegheny Cemetery, the lovely, hazy autumn day, the solemn burial service, the volleys fired, the "taps sounded," all combined to make this one of the most unique and impressive services ever held in Pittsburg.

VII. Arrangements were made to place a marker at the grave of Samuel V. Waldron, a private in the New Jersey Minutemen, at Central Town, now Grove City; the time was fixed, an honor guard of soldiers from Gen. Hulings' regiment had agreed to be present; but just before the appointed day arrived the entire State Guard was ordered to the coal regions, and the matter, to our great regret, was postponed indefinitely.

VIII. Our New Castle Chapter is enthusiastic and progressive; it is doing much valuable work of a kind not yet attempted here. Your President was a guest of this Chapter at its last annual meeting, and will long remember its charming hospitality.

During the year 35 copies of the National Register have been purchased, and distributed to as many public libraries throughout the State.

We have admitted 38 new members.

We have demitted one member to another State society. One member has resigned.

The total number of active members is now 384. We have during the year lost by death four members, viz: Dr. Asher H. Bennett, of Brussels, Belgium; Franklin A. Dean, of Allegheny; Charles T. Neale, of Pittsburg, and Col. Thomas Nichols, of Allegheny—the most sorely afflicted yet cheerful and enthusiastic of our members, a West Point graduate. We had "taps" sounded at his funeral, and for this action our society received the grateful mention and hearty approval of the officiating clergyman. The historian will report these deaths in detail.

A year ago we had a balance in our treasury of $1,329 70. Our receipts during the year were $1,153 76. Our expenditures, $1,361 88. The balance now on hand is $1,121 58 as detailed in reports of the treasurer.

We are asked to say that several members have neglected to pay the dues for last year. They have doubtless forgotten it in the press of other business.

Our Secretary will present his report in detail.

We desire to thank all those who have given their time, thought or counsel to our society during the past year.

WILLIAM L. JONES,
President.

Historian's Report.

Where Our Revolutionary Ancestors Are Buried.

THROUGH its historian the Pennsylvania Society has begun a record of the burial places of soldiers of the American Revolution whose graves are in Pennsylvania. The historian receives and files all records of such graves, irrespective of the State in which they may be, but we publish here only those in our own State. In time this record will become very valuable and very large. It will have an educational result, graves will be looked up and marked, committees will be aroused to preserve and care for them, patriotic and historic sentiment will be fostered, the purposes of our Society will be emphasized and the memory of our heroic dead will be honored. All reports should be sent to the historian, the Rev. W. A. Stanton, D.D., 6340 Marchand street, Pittsburgh.

THE OLD REVOLUTIONARY CANNON.

Revolutionary Trophies.

THE War Department of the United States having, pursuant to a joint resolution of Congress, placed in the custody of this Society certain pieces of ordnance, which were trophies of the Revolutionary War, and which had been preserved, for many years, at the Allegheny Arsenal, it was thought proper to hold a public meeting of the Society on the occasion of the reception of said cannon. That meeting was held at Carnegie Music Hall, in Pittsburgh, on the evening of May the twenty-third, 1902. An invitation to attend the meeting was given to all the other hereditary-patriotic societies of the vicinity, and to the public generally (see page 43 ante). Hon. John Dalzell, on behalf of the U. S. Government, made an address and delivered the guns to the Society. Hon. Harry Alvin Hall followed, on behalf of the Society, with an address accepting the guns, and placing them in the immediate custody of the Carnegie Museum for safe keeping and exhibition. To the latter address Rev. W. J. Holland, D.D., LL.D., Curator of the Museum, responded on behalf of that Institution, and said cannon are now on exhibition at the Museum. The interesting and valuable addresses of Hon. John Dalzell and Doctor Holland are here printed, but to the great regret of the Society the manuscript of Hon. Harry Alvin Hall's address was lost directly after the meeting.

Address of Hon. John Dalzell, M.C.

AS I look on this splendid audience I am moved by mingled feelings of pleasure and of pain. By feelings of pleasure because I recognize so universal a desire to participate in a ceremony that excites the liveliest feelings of patriotism and love of country; by feelings of pain because of memories that the surroundings suggest. It has been my honor and my pleasure to speak on more than one occasion from this platform. I had an humble place in the dedication of this library. I am now most impressed with the fact that the last time I stood here to make an address was when I shared the privilege of speech with that beloved man whose memory is hallowed to-night wherever civilization extends in the hearts of all peoples, the martyred President, my friend, William McKinley. For me his charming personality pervades this place. I seem to hear again the ringing tones of his sympathetic voice, his inspiring call to high endeavor and to noble purpose, and for the moment I am fain to think it an unhealthy dream that anything so atrocious can be a part of American history as his death at the hands of a cowardly assassin. He was so brave, so manly, so gently and humane that the deep damnation of his taking off is almost beyond human conception. Fact in his case outruns fiction. Surely the poetic genius of all the ages must have had him in prophetic conception when he put into the mouth of the eulogist of Brutus the touching and immortal words :

“His life was gentle, and the elements so mixed in him that nature might stand up and say to all the world, this was a man.”

The burning text of the hour is patriotism ; our country, its glorious past, its prosperous present, and its pregnant future ; its history, its institutions, its dominant and inspiring duties and responsibilities. It is a good thing for us to be here to-night, to withdraw for a moment from the heat and burden of the day, from the haunts of trade, from the dizzy round of the exchange, from the depressing influences of money getting and sordid views of life, to take a draught at the fountain of sentiment and renew our tribute of devotion to our country and its flag.

It is a healthy sign of American life that we have such associations as the Sons and Daughters of the American Revolution. They are not alone the custodians, they are also the present embodiment of the spirit of '76. It is not history that they stand for, but the inspiring spirit of history. From sire to son, from matron to maid, down through the generations runs the fire that blazed in answer to Paul Revere's ride, and burned Lexington and Concord in large letters upon the luminous page of great achievements.

What a story that is, the story of the American Revolution! Thirteen little colonies against the power of Imperial Britain; the story that stretches from Bunker Hill to Yorktown and embraces in its reach of suffering and courage that terrible winter at Valley Forge. It is simply matchless in history. A story of successes, of defeats, of envyings and jealousies, of conspiracies, of despair at times, of hopes and fears, but above all of a never-failing high purpose; its central figure at all times the calm, determined and peerless Washington, whose hand was on the helm. How admirable it all is and how, despite the intervening years, it yet thrills our blood at this very hour!

My special mission here to-night is to place in the custody of the Pennsylvania Society of the Sons of the American Revolution these guns, trophies of that great struggle. They have remained for more than three quarters of a century in the Allegheny Arsenal, hidden from view and serving no useful purpose. Henceforth they are to be in the public gaze to tell the story and enforce the lesson of patriotism to young and old alike. The Allegheny Arsenal, dear to all Pittsburghers, seems to have served its purpose and to be no longer necessary in the military establishment of our government. I have not yet abandoned a hope that for many years I have cherished, that the means may be found whereby it may become, as a lasting memorial of its former usefulness and a continuing beneficence, a public park for the enjoyment of our citizens.

There is little of romance attendant upon its history. It does not reach back to Revolutionary times, though it is a distinct link with the now rapidly receding past.

It was founded in 1814, and embraced a reservation of thirty-six acres. The amount expended for the purchase of land, buildings and improvements from 1814 to 1860 was less than half a million of dollars. In 1898 the estimate of its value by the War Department was $1,225,542. From the time of its establishment it was used for the storage of cannon, the repair of muskets, the manufacture of equipments for infantry, cavalry and artillery soldiers. Large quantities of projectiles for field and siege cannon, and ammunition for small arms were there manufactured during the civil war. During that war and the war with Mexico it bore a large part in furnishing supplies for the soldiers in the field. Surrounded as it is now by a thickly built section of a rapidly growing city; furnaces, mills and factories all around it; it is difficult for us to conceive of it as it was originally; a conspicuous feature in the midst of green fields in the beautiful Allegheny Valley—one of the most charming valleys in the world.

It had the honor of a visit from Lafayette in 1825. There is so much of quaintness in the story of that visit, so much of the atmosphere of other days, that you will perhaps bear with me when I recite it in the language of a local author:

“Monday, the 29th of May, 1825, was a gala day in Pittsburgh, for on that day, Lafayette, the idol of the people, arrived in the city in the course of his tour of the United States. He had been invited by President Monroe, at the request of Congress, to be the Nation's guest. Forty years had passed since he had been in America, and he was now a venerable man of three score and ten.  After visiting Uniontown and the residence of Albert Gallatin, Lafayette, on the 28th day of May, proceeded to Elizabeth, where he, with his party, embarked in a four-oared boat and were rowed down the Monongahela to Braddock's Field, which they reached about sunset. Some time was spent in viewing the famous battle field and discussing the memorable action that had transpired there just seventy years before. Even at that late day the plough could not trace a furrow without turning up bones whitened by time, and fragments of arms corroded by rust. At Braddock's Field he was entertained by George Wallace, Esquire, at his elegant mansion, who received him with the utmost cordiality. A large deputation of citizens of Pittsburgh here greeted the General, and next morning at daylight Captain Murray's troop of light dragoons arrived to serve as an escort to the city."

We have no minute details of that great occasion, but enough is on record to enable us to get a pretty clear idea of the affair. The entire route from Braddock's Field to Pittsburgh, we are informed, was covered with people, in the midst of whom the cavalcade advanced slowly toward the city. On the way the Arsenal was visited and a discharge of twenty-four guns announced the arrival of Lafayette. Major Churchill and the officers of the garrison entertained the distinguished visitor at breakfast. Upon leaving the Arsenal he was conducted to 'Bell's clover field' where the local military companies under command of General Wilkins were drawn up to receive him.

How much of romance the years have added to that simple narrative. Lafayette, the young and dashing Frenchman whose love of liberty induced his abandonment of home and friends, to risk his life in the cause of the struggling colonists, and who became the bosom friend of Washington; Lafayette, gray and wrinkled by the storms of three score years and ten, but in whose heart there yet burned the youthful love of freedom, a survivor of the French Revolution, returning to view the country that he helped to save. Lafayette paying respectful homage to the home of Gallatin, the greatest of all our earlier financiers, save only Hamilton. The stage ride from Uniontown to Elizabeth; the row boat ride on the placid waters of the Monongahela, its virgin forests on either hand, to Braddock's field, where even then the farmer turned up with his plow the whitening bones of the ill-fated victims of Braddock's ill-fated expedition. Wallace's splendid mansion at which he stopped. The cavalcade winding under that May day sun through the fertile East Liberty Valley to the Arsenal; the hospitable meal, the salute of honor and then on to the city with anxious suspense awaiting his coming. The stop at Bell's clover field. Where was it? Who can answer? Naught do we know of it save its perfume as it clings to the story of Lafayette's ride to Pittsburgh. How real it all seems, and yet how unreal! Two days from Uniontown to Pittsburgh! The forests have gone, save the forests of stacks, pillars of smoke by day and of fire by night, that point the march of giant industries. No plows now penetrate the soil of Braddock's Field occupied by the great works created by the genius of Andrew Carnegie. Time and distance have succumbed to the ever advancing inventive genius of man, and nature even assumed new aspects in answer to new conditions.

In years gone by I have many times wandered in the Arsenal grounds, but it will always be associated in my memory with a boyish recollection. The year was 1860. James Buchanan was President of the United States. John B. Floyd was his Secretary of War. The Secretary sent an order that would have stripped the Arsenal of its guns and sent them south. Secession was in the air. The order created the most intense indignation amongst the citizens of Pittsburgh. While the guns were on their way down Wood street to the Monongahela wharf to be shipped on boats there awaiting them, the citizens rose in arms. They sent a protest to Washington. They held an indignation meeting and from the steps of the old court house I listened to the impassioned eloquence of Thomas Williams, then or afterwards a member of Congress from this district, arguing against violence and appealing to a reverence for law. The Secretary's order was withdrawn and the guns remained where they belonged, with us. Grand old Thomas Williams! Allegheny county never had an abler or more faithful representative in the National Congress! He was one of the Committee of the House of Representatives to prosecute on its part President Johnson in the impeachment proceedings against him, and, in my judgment, his argument was the ablest of all made on his side of the case in that remarkable trial.

But whether the Allegheny Arsenal is historically conspicuous or not, it is still humbly a part of Pennsylvania's history, and there is no single chapter in the story of liberty on this continent in which Pennsylvania is not entitled to honorable mention.

It was at the junction of these rivers, the headwaters of the Ohio, that Saxon and Latin engaged in a death struggle for the possession of a continent. It was here that finally the lilies of France gave place to the Lion of St. George and Fort Duquesne became Fort Pitt, in honor of the great English statesman who was our friend. It was on Pennsylvania soil that the proclamation of the equality of man and of the Independence of the Colonists was made, when the old Liberty Bell rang out the tidings of freedom to the land and to all the inhabitants thereof.

It was on Pennsylvania soil that in that awful winter at Valley Forge the barefooted soldiers of Washington proved throughout all hardships their continued loyalty to the cause of their country and of liberty and strengthened the arm of their great chief. And when the time came for uniting in closer bonds the original States, for forming a more perfect union, it was in Pennsylvania's historic hall that the framework of government was conceived and consummated that throughout all our history has proved the sheet anchor of our safety. And when again in more recent years the warring principles of liberty and slavery engaged in their inevitable death struggle, it was on Pennsylvania soil, on the heights of Gettysburg, that the wave of rebellion crested and broke, amid such slaughter as exhausts the tears of pity, amid such heroism as makes us proud to know that the men on either side were Americans. Pennsylvania's relations to the cause, not of the Revolution alone, but to its very principles and to the course of human progress, is as exhaustless as it is a fascinating theme.

The American Congress, recognizing a proper sentiment in our people of Pittsburgh looking toward the retention in our midst of these revolutionary trophies, generously passed a law at its present session, allowing us to have them stored in the Carnegie Institute, to be in the custody of the Pennsylvania Society of the Sons of the American Revolution.

And so to-night they recall to us the great struggle that resulted in founding on this continent a Republic where all men are free. I take no part in the criticisms of those who mourn our alleged failure to realize the ideals of the fathers. There is nothing human that is perfect and without defects; and I do affirm that a more perfect government than ours in the interest of universal and individual liberty was never dreamed of by the wildest of theorists. In practical good to the masses and to the man it outruns the dreams of any Utopian, the wildest ideals of Rousseau, or Bacon, or Sir Thomas Moore.

One of these cannons bears an inscription: "Surrendered by the Convention of Saratoga, October 17th, 1777." How suggestive that is! It is a voice reaching us from a far distant past, and calling us to listen to its story. In the long roll of the events that throughout the ages have been decisive of the course of history, the Burgoyne campaign, ending with the surrender at Saratoga, bears a conspicuous part. What Marathon was to Greece, what Waterloo was to the allied forces, Saratoga was to the struggling Colonists. If this dumb bronze had speech tonight, it would tell us in detail of the ambitious project that contemplated final overthrow of the Revolutionists and the retention of their territory under British rule; it would tell us in detail of the incidents of that decisive campaign when the brilliant Burgoyne met his fate at Saratoga. Compared with the battles of modern warfare, or, indeed, with those of earlier warfare, the fight at Saratoga was insignificant. In the number of men engaged, in the weapons of slaughter, it is not to be compared with battles that have since been fought. But it was great in results. In that aspect it fills a broad page in the world's history, in the history of achievements, in the cause of human liberty and Republican Government.

There was only one way in which it was possible for England to separate the New England colonies from the others, and that was by possession of the Hudson River. To obtain this an effort was made in the summer of 1776. The British general, Carleton, descended from Canada, and Sir William Howe was to advance from New York, join the Northern army and thus gain control of the Hudson and the lakes running up to Canada. That project failed. General Howe was delayed and baffled by Washington until the time went by when he might have been successful. In the next year, however, the British ministry organized a new expedition and placed it in charge of Sir John Burgoyne. In June, 1777, he opened his campaign. He had an army of nearly eight thousand men, a little more than half English, a little less than half German mercenaries, over five hundred Indians and less than two hundred Canadians. With this force he was to move directly South, and, having won his way, to consolidate his forces with those of General Howe. A smaller expedition was sent West to reduce Ft. Stanwix and then by way of the Mohawk Valley join the main army at Albany. At first all went well. Ft. Ticonderoga was taken by the British; then Ft. Edward. But then troubles began. Gen. Schuyler, in command at Ft. Edward of less than five thousand men, retreated, destroying the roads, burning bridges, filling up water ways and stripping the country of cattle and provisions. Meantime Burgoyne's Indian allies had been practicing the barbarities of Indian warfare and had raised such a spirit of indignation that the American Army was gaining recruits in large numbers. Then came the news of the defeat at Oriskany of the Western expedition which had intended to join the army by way of the Mohawk Valley; then followed the defeat at Bennington of an expedition sent out by Burgoyne to gather provisions for his now needy army. Then came more recruits for the American army. August 19th, General Horatio Gates succeeded General Schuyler and found himself at the head of a growing army in high spirits, full of hope and ambition, and facing Burgoyne's depleted army hard pressed by the disasters at Oriskany in the West, and Bennington in the East, and by want of provisions.

Another difficulty now threatened the British. General Lincoln had moved to their rear, retaken Ft. Ticonderoga, released the American prisoners, captured some hundreds of British soldiers and five cannon. It would be tedious to go into the details of the maneuvers of battle that followed. Suffice it to say that on the 19th of September a battle was fought known as the Battle of Freeman's Farm, the result of which was a draw instead of a decisive victory; a result due, it is said, to a lack of generalship upon the part of General Gates. Less than a month later another battle took place in which the British were routed, losing amongst other things nine guns—maybe we have some of them here to-night. Burgoyne then retreated to Saratoga, and on the 14th of October, 1777, sent a flag of truce to treat for a surrender. "By the Convention of Saratoga," made two days afterwards, "a British general with his army, numbering 5791, surrendered: 1856 prisoners of war were already in the hands of the Americans. Including the losses in the field and in the various actions from Ticonderoga and Oriskany to Bennington and Saratoga, England lost 10,000 men, and had surrendered at Saratoga 42 guns and 4,600 muskets."

Thus ended England's most ambitious effort to quell the colonists' revolt. It was defeated by the splendid courage and endurance of the New England farmers in defense of their homes and their firesides and in their devotion to the cause of ultimate American independence.

There are two matters of interesting history in connection with it; one, that the victory was in no sense due to the Commander in Chief, General Gates, who is now known principally as a conspirator to supersede General Washington; another, that the result was largely due to the conspicuous and reckless bravery of Benedict Arnold, who, subsequently a traitor to his country, is ranked with Iscariot who betrayed his Lord and Master.

Saratoga was a decisive battle because it convinced the American soldier that he knew how to fight, and how, in fighting, to take advantage of all his natural resources. It was a decisive battle because it infused a new courage in the hearts of the whole American people. It was a decisive battle because it taught Europe the lesson that the colonists could not be conquered, and because it brought to them European encouragement and aid. It brought to them Lafayette and DeKalb and Kosciusko and Baron Steuben, natural lovers of liberty and volunteer soldiers in her cause.

But it was especially a decisive battle because it opened the welcome door to our diplomatists and to an European alliance. Arthur Lee and Silas Dean, John Adams and the greatest of them all, Benjamin Franklin, caught the ear of the French Court.

There is no more charming chapter in the history of American diplomacy abroad than that which records the story of Benjamin Franklin's experience in France. Senator Lodge says in his history of the American Revolution: "Statesmen listened to him respectfully, the great ladies of the brilliant and frivolous court flattered and admired him, the crowds cheered him in the streets, and when the Academy received Voltaire the audience, comprising all that was most distinguished in arts and letters, demanded that he and Franklin should embrace each other in their presence. * * * Both were children of the century, both represented the great movement of the time for intellectual and political freedom then beginning to culminate. * * * The Democratic movement, still hidden in the shadows and the depths, but none the less beginning to move and live in France, recognized instinctively the meaning of the same movement which had started into full life in America with arms in its hands. This was the deep underlying cause of the French alliance when the surrender of Burgoyne said, not merely to ministers intent on policy, but to a nation with visions in its brain, here is an armed people, not only fighting for the rights of man, but fighting victoriously and bringing to wreck and extinction a king's army which had been sent against them."

Gentlemen of the Pennsylvania Society of the Sons of the American Revolution, I give unto your keeping these trophies of the great struggle that brought forth the American Republic. Deposited here where all may see them they will ever serve to be reminders of a war which had for its purpose the highest good of the individual man, and let us hope will ever prove a present and convincing lesson in patriotism. Patriotism may be hard to define. It is always love of country, and of such institutions as mean the welfare of country. There may be degrees and kinds of patriotism. "L'Etat, c'est moi" said Louis the Fourteenth. "I am the State." The patriotism of that day was loyalty to the king. Our patriotism is of another kind. It is loyalty to the great principles of English liberty and to the institutions that are their fruits. It finds its emblems in that most beautiful of all the banners that float upon the winds—whether they be the winds of peace or the winds of war—the stars and stripes.

"Among the nations, bright beyond compare;
What were our lives without thee?
We reck not what we gave thee;
We will not dare to doubt thee,
But ask whatever else and we will dare."

Address of Rev. W. J. Holland, D.D., LL. D.

R. President, Ladies and Gentlemen: These things have throats of brass—reminding us of some of those who on the hustings and in the halls of legislative debate urged their mission to this country. They came by order of an insensate king, confirmed in his folly by the obsequious flatterers of his court, deaf to the counsels, the admonitions and the warnings of that great man whose name is proudly borne to-day by this great city. They came to rudely roar down with their brazen throats the voice of liberty and the rights of man. Across the blue lakes of the northland, through the primeval forests, where the pine trees sighed as they passed, the men who bore them laboriously made their way, until on the field of Saratoga they met the embattled lines of American freemen; and then they became dumb; or, if they lifted up their voices again amidst the turmoil of conflict, it was as converts to the cause against which their throats had been bidden to speak. For many years they have lain in mute, inglorious silence, annually daubed with coats of disfiguring paint, to boil which away, and to restore them to their true appearance, religiously preserving all the nicks and dents of battle and of use, has required much patience and much skill. They lie before you with all the scars of the years that have passed uneffaced, freed simply from filth, which tends nowhere either to preserve or to beautify, whether in the domain of physics or of morals.

You have asked me, sir, whether these memorials of the past, committed to the custody of the institution, which I have the honor of representing, shall forever be dumb, or whether it is our purpose hereafter to cause them to speak lessons of instruction to the people of this city and of our land. I will answer you.

The Carnegie Museum was founded by the man, whose name it bears, for the purpose of teaching truth, as well as for the purpose of preserving for those who love the truth, the things which are the embodiment of lessons taught alike by human history and the operation of natural laws. The Carnegie Museum is intended to be a treasure-house, in which shall be accumulated in the lapse of years collections, which shall not merely illustrate to the curious the wonderful story of the development of the material universe, but which shall also illustrate the process of human history. In the great addition to this structure which the founder is impatient to erect, and to the erection of which he has consecrated millions of dollars—(Oh, that the weary years of unnecessary waiting for the fulfilment of his hopes may soon be ended!)—there is provided a large hall which in our plan is designated as the Hall of History, and in this we shall be proud to place these cannon. Here they will silently teach to the millions, who will pass them with admiring eyes, lessons of patriotism and of loyalty to those high principles which guided our forefathers as they laid the foundations of greater England, the flag of which to-day, like the flag of that elder England, is kissed in every hour of the twenty-four by the glorifying light of the sun.

These guns will teach not merely lessons of patriotism, but lessons of faith. They will declare to those who look upon them, reading the past in the light of the present, that He who is the "God of Battles," the supreme Arbiter of human events, is able to 'make even the wrath of man to praise Him,' and, so to overrule acts planned by human folly, as to work out His own majestic purposes of love and mercy to the sons of men. Long years have passed since the hands of our Anglo-Saxon brethren were raised in hostile conflict against us. The passions and the prejudices then awakened have been in large measure subdued, and we are coming to realize that the mission of English-speaking men, called in the providence of God to positions of greater power and of influence the world around, is to stand in advocacy of judgment unto mercy and for the maintenance of justice, righteousness and peace among the kindreds of the earth.

Lessons of loyalty to that flag which we love, lessons of faith in Him whom we call "our fathers' God," lessons of calm confidence in the ultimate triumph of right over wrong, of justice over injustice, of truth over error, will be taught, we believe, by these historic relics, which on behalf of this institution I to-day, as its representative and chief executive officer, receive as a sacred trust delivered at your hands from the people of the United States in Congress assembled. Rest assured, sir, that we shall take good care of that which you have committed to our charge. Know that we are profoundly grateful to you and to all who have been concerned in securing to our city the preservation in our midst of those valued memorials, and that this hour will abide in grateful recollection.

Re=interment of the Remains of Revolutionary Soldiers.

IT is a well known fact that the bodies of many soldiers of the Revolutionary War were, at their deaths, buried in the old grave-yard of the First Presbyterian Church, on Wood street, in the City of Pittsburgh. Many of the bodies, so buried, were afterwards moved by their friends to other resting places, but it was known that some, (and among them those of some of the most distinguished of those old heroes), still remained in the old burying-ground in the year 1902. During that year the First Church made arrangements for great and important changes in its property which would make necessary the removal of all the bodies still remaining there.

It seemed proper that this Society should interest itself to see that removal of the remains of any Revolutionary soldiers should be conducted in an appropriate manner, and the matter was placed in charge of a committee, who found and identified the burial places of three eminent soldiers and citizens, viz, Gen. John Neville, Maj. Isaac Craig and Col. James Johnston, also that of Mrs. Winfred Neville, wife of Gen. Neville, who was buried by his side. A number of other interments could not be identified.

With the consent of the families of the deceased heroes, the removal and re-interment of their remains was made the occasion of impressive, religious and patriotic ceremonies at the old church and at the Allegheny Cemetery, on October the twenty-third, 1902.

A full account of these ceremonies is found in the Report of the Board of Management at the Annual Meeting of the Society, page 46.

The addresses, made by distinguished speakers, upon the occasion, are printed here; and also a newspaper account, taken from the Pittsburgh Times of the following day.

Memorial Address of Rev. R. S. Holmes, D.D.

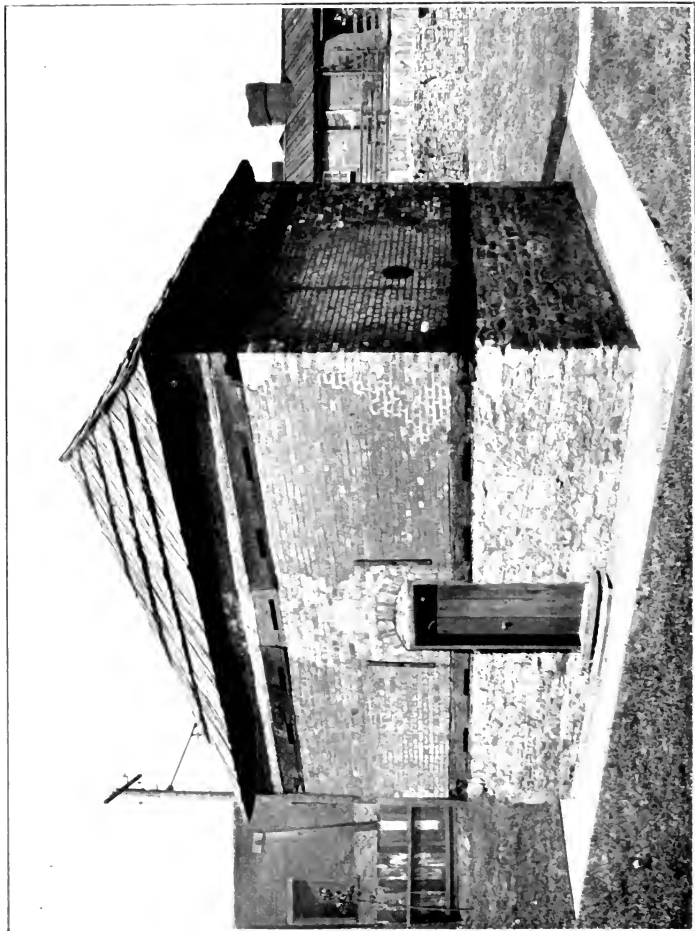

ON occasion of removing the remains of Soldiers of the American Revolution from the Old Burial Ground of the First Presbyterian Church in Wood street, Pittsburgh, Pa. (See page 47).

To touch the graves where sleep the dead must always awaken peculiar emotions in a reverent heart. To reverence, the dead are sacred. Our fathers, aye our grandfathers laid to rest here those for whom we gather to-day to render a service made necessary by the progress of events. How great are the changes of the years. How little we foresee them. When here long ago one spoke the words "forasmuch as it hath pleased Almighty God to take out of this world the soul of our departed brother we now commit his body to the ground," none could have thought the hour would ever come when for that body another earthly resting place must be sought. But that time has come. The demand of tumultuous life is irreverent when it wants a spot where even the dead of its own past generation lie. Business, the modern juggernaut, rolls its car straight onward over our cherished traditions, leveling to the ground the obstacles in its way, even though they be historic structures for which our forbears died. The growth of a great city is remorseless. In it there is no pity. The church building of to-day gives place to the horse-market of to-morrow. The old "grave yard" as our fathers called the spot where they laid the forms of their loved ones must deliver up all that it holds that was mortal, and must see its grave stones vanish, that a mighty modern wonder of steel and stone may rise as temple of a ceaseless energy. To us, and to this sacred spot that time has come. Sacred? Yes; it is the burying ground of four nations. How little thought the Indian who buried his braves here in the deep forest two hundred and fifty years ago, that the Frenchman would take the place, and in it lay to rest his soldiers from beyond the sea, who far from home and native land died in the wilderness. How little thought that Frenchman as he fired the salute over his departed comrade that the hour would ever come when his Cemetery of the Assumption of the Blessed Virgin would pass into the hands of the English, his hated foes; or that name of William Pitt would be perpetuated forever on the spot where Bienville had planted the lilies of France. How much less thought the Englishman that in this same burying place would lie, awaiting the resurrection of the just, the bones of those who would have part in driving him, his army and his king out of the thirteen American Colonies.

Sometimes the Englishman with regret may think of Bunker Hill and Yorktown, but never he thinks of the dead in Virgin Cemetery at Pittsburgh, on the far off Ohio. And we ourselves, in the busy rush of this busy town, unless we are the descendants of the dead, have never known that men lie here who gave their lives and all to the founding of the Republic. Men walk by hundreds every day through Virgin Alley who do not know that the narrow thoroughfare gets its name from the Cemetery of the Assumption of the Blessed Virgin. We may be history makers, but we are not history rememberers. We are too busy. We rush out of to-day into to-morrow, only remembering to-day, when it has become yesterday, for what it may have contributed to the material success, or failure of the new to-day into which we have rushed. Take the name, for example, of O'Hara. It was a name of one of our fine East End streets, and it should have been allowed to remain as the name of that thoroughfare because it meant something; but it disappeared from the column of names of our streets to give place to one reminding the passer by, not that a soldier of the Revolution had honored this region with his presence, and had died and was buried here, but that once William and Mary had been sovereigns of that England which drove our forefathers into revolution. We have the "Block House" still, but the price we have paid is the eternal vigilance of the Society of the Daughters of the American Revolution. We have Neville Street still, and Craig Street, and Bayard Street, and Butler Street, and Wilkins Avenue; may the hour never come when we will not have them. And yet can we do aught but regret that they are unmarked save by the name? To one who reads the sign, and knows nothing of the local history it conveys no meaning. Should there not be placed at some point on each of these streets a marker saying: "This street is named for a soldier of the American Revolution whose life was connected inseparably with the early years of this city, and of the valley of the Ohio, and is in honored remembrance of his service to the cause of American liberty.' That would be a noble thing for this city to do. Thinking such thoughts, I am glad the hour has come when, though we disturb the ashes of the dead, we may, because of our act, emphasize to the living who they were who have so long lain here, and what they did, and what we owe to them. I am glad the last quarter of a century has seen a revival of interest in American history ; glad so many Americans have sought their ancestry ; glad civic societies with a holy, patriotic purpose have begun efforts to secure a perpetuation of the memory of those who laid the foundations of the Republic. It is sometimes said of these two civic societies, the Daughters of the American Revolution, and the Sons of the American Revolution, that they have done nothing to warrant their existence, but are simply reminders that their members had ancestors who did mighty deeds of valor in the name of liberty. Well, that is true. And to that we answer, that very thing is the warrant for the existence of such societies. We did have ancestors who did great deeds, and we do not mean that their great deeds shall be forgotten ; and if we succeed in our purpose, history will owe much to us. To protect the monuments of the Revolutionary period which have survived the ravages of time from the Vandal spirit of modern commercialism, is warrant enough for our existence. "Old Glory," with its stars and stripes, is the greatest monument of the Revolutionary period, and though it is in no danger of destruction, it has been in danger of desecration by the commercial spirit, and while the Sons of the American Revolution shall maintain their organization, they will spare no effort to keep it from such desecration to low, cheap uses. The street names which I have already mentioned are monuments of the Revolutionary period, and city councils will change those names only after hearing vigorous protesting words from these civic organizations. It is this spirit of intense love for those long departed heroes that brings us together on this occasion, when church policy and business interest unite to demand that the ground where sleep historic dead be surrendered. It is meet as we remove these ashes to some consecrated spot where they can lie, to be disturbed no more until the resurrection at the last day, that we pause for a moment from our ceaseless activity to offer the tribute of honor to their memory.

It has fallen to my lot as a member of the Society of the Sons of the American Revolution to speak briefly in memory of three of these Revolutionary heroes.

The first of whom I am to speak is General John Neville who was buried in this old burial place on the last day of July, 1803, about ninety-nine years and three months ago. He was the son of George Neville, and Ann Burroughs, and was on his mother's side descended from the English nobility, as she was a cousin of Lord Fairfax. He was born in the Colony of Virginia, near the head waters of Bull Run which is a small tributary of the Occoquare river, and the name of which was destined to become one never to be forgotten in United States history. From an early age his fortunes were identical with those of his country, and his service to his country extended from the New England coast to the Ohio valley. While not himself a pioneer in the settlement of the west, he was in the wake of those hardy men who invaded the wilderness, who cleared it, and won for the young nation its vast western domain. In 1755, when only twenty-four years of age, he marched with the army of Braddock, in company with George Washington, who was his early and life long friend. On his return to Virginia he was made sheriff of Frederick County and, accepting the office, entered upon a long and useful official career. As both soldier and civilian he rendered valuable service to his country. When Lord Dunmore crossed over the mountains in 1774 to aid, against the Indians, the scattered settlers, who under Boone and his pioneer associates had already begun to fill up the parts of Kentucky adjacent to the Ohio River, Neville was a member of the expedition. Long previous to this and no doubt as a result of his expedition with Braddock, taken with the beauty of the region, he had by purchase and entry become possessor of large tracts of land on Charters Creek, and his intention seems to have been to make this section his home, for he built a house upon his property which was still standing and occupied in 1886, and, for aught I know to the contrary, may be standing and occupied yet. On his return to Virginia after Lord Dunmore's expedition, he found the colonies in too great turmoil to carry out his purpose of removal west of the Allegheny Mountains. The restless spirit of the period seems to have characterized him also, as he changed his residence often. In 1775 he had moved from Frederick County, the most northerly county of the Colony, to Augusta County in the center of the Colony, and from that county he was in that year, 1775, a delegate to the Provincial Convention of Virginia. On the 7th of August of the same year he was ordered to march with a company of soldiers to take possession of Fort Pitt which the English had abandoned. Two days before Christmas, 1775, he was commissioned Justice of the Peace for Yohogania County, but declined the appointment because in command of Fort Pitt. In 1776 he was back near his old home in Virginia, where he raised a company of soldiers which he equipped at his own expense, and with it marched to Boston to join Gen. Washington. From that time he was active in the War of the American Revolution. On November 12th, 1776, he was Lieutenant Colonel of the Twelfth Regiment of the Virginia Line; one year later on December 11th, 1777, he was Colonel of the Eighth Regiment of the same service, and on September 14th, 1778, he became Colonel of the Fourth Regiment of Virginia troops, and with it fought until the close of war. He took part in the battles of Trenton, Princeton, Monmouth and Germantown, and doubtless in many others, as he seems to have continued with the army of Washington, as was natural because of their close friendship.

When the war was over his patriotic activity did not cease. He helped to found the Virginia Society of the Cincinnati, was a member of the Supreme Executive Council of Pennsylvania from November 11th, 1783, until November 20th, 1786; was a delegate to the Pennsylvania Convention of 1787 that ratified the Federal Constitution; was a signer of the ratification, and from that hour until his death was identified with the interests of this Commonwealth. His home at Woodville, Pennsylvania, in Allegheny county, was the temple of hospitality to which all respectable strangers repaired. He was elected to the Legislative General Assembly of the Commonwealth in 1788, and served for three years, and until after the adoption of the State Constitution of 1789-1790. There followed then an unpleasant episode in the history of Gen. Neville. In 1790 Alexander Hamilton, Secretary of the Treasury under President Washington, secured the passage of a law placing a tax on the distillation of whiskey, and the famous "Whiskey Insurrection" followed. Gen.

Neville, at the earnest solicitation of Washington and Hamilton, accepted the post of Inspector of Revenue for Western Pennsylvania. His act brought him for a time into great unpopularity. He was insulted, and mobbed and finally his home at Woodville was burned to the ground on July 16th, 1794, after a stubborn defense by his servants. Gen. Neville had been appointed Brigade Inspector of Pennsylvania Militia by Governor Mifflin, and should have received the support of the Governor in his attempts to enforce law, but he was instead left defenseless, and suffered great loss in the destruction of his Woodville mansion, because the Governor on various pretexts refused to allow the militia to be called to quell the insurrection. After the burning of his Woodville home, Gen. Neville removed to Pittsburgh, where he purchased the residence of Col. George Morgan, at the corner of Water and Ferry streets. Here for a time he lived, but finally preferring the open country went down the Ohio a short distance to Montour, now Neville Island, which he purchased, and there spent the remainder of his days. He died July 29th, 1803, aged seventy-two years and three days. He was buried in Pittsburgh in the old burial ground which had served as final resting place for four nationalities in four different epochs of our country's history. The slab which marked his grave bore this inscription:

“In memory of Gen. John Neville who departed this life July 29, 1803, aged seventy-two years and three days. During his long life he filled many important offices both civil and military: in the former he was virtuous and disinterested; in the latter he was patriotic and brave. He enjoyed the friendship and confidence of the illustrious Washington. The day of his death witnessed the most pleasing tribute that can be paid to the memory of a mortal, the sincere regrets of his friends, and the tears of the neighboring poor. He was a consistent member of the Protestant Episcopal Church, and the first church of that denomination west of the Allegheny Mountains was built at his expense on the site of the present stone church at Woodville, Allegheny County.”

An obituary at the time of his death says: “He was the model of a perfect gentleman, as elegant in his person, and finished in his manners, as he was generous and noble in his feelings.” He left two children, a son and a daughter. The son was Gen. Presley Neville who was also a distinguished soldier of

The American Revolution, a member of the staff of Gen. Lafayette. The daughter was Amelia Neville, who became the wife of Major Isaac Craig, who is the second of the soldiers in whose memory we are to-day rendering the service made necessary by the changes wrought by time.

Isaac Craig was an Irishman. His father was agent managing the estate of the Earl of Hillsborough, and Isaac was born near Hillsborough, County Down, Ireland, in 1741. He emigrated to America in 1765, and settled in Philadelphia, where he lived until the outbreak of the Revolutionary War. He entered the service of his adopted country, and was by the vicissitudes of war brought at last to Pittsburgh, near which, on Montour Island, after a life of usefulness he died May 14th, 1826, aged eighty-five years. He was buried in the graveyard of the First Presbyterian Church seventy-six years ago. His first military appointment he received in 1775, when he was made ranking Lieutenant of Marines in the infant American Navy. His first service was on the vessel "Andrew Doria," under the command of the gallant Captain Nicholas Biddle, who had himself been a seaman under Lord Nelson. Lieutenant Craig took part in the expedition of Commodore Hopkins which captured the two Forts, Nassau and Montague, on the island of New Providence in the West Indies, and which made prisoner of the Governor, and secured a large number of cannon, and a quantity of military stores, then much needed by the Colonial troops. These guns were subsequently used in the forts in Rhode Island and on the Delaware River. Returning from this expedition, Lieutenant Craig received a Captain's commission, bearing date October 22d, 1776, and in the following November with his marines was ordered to join the army to thereafter do duty as Infantry. It thus happened that the naval captain was present, and took part in the battles that followed the crossing of the Delaware, Trenton with its capture of the Hessians, and Princeton. On the third day of March, 1777, he was again transferred in the service, this time from the infantry to the artillery service, in which he came under the command of Col. Thomas Proctor, and in this capacity continued to serve through 1777 and 1778. On the eleventh of September, 1777, he was severely wounded in the battle of Brandywine, but in the following month, December, he was back with his battery, took part in the battle of Germantown, and bombarded the Chew House, an action famous in Revolutionary annals because of its gallant defense by Major Musgrove. Next Captain Craig passed through the ordeal of the winter at Valley Forge, and when spring came was ordered with other officers to Carlisle to learn from Captain Isaac Corce the "laboratory art."

On the 29th of March, 1779, he was ordered to the command of the fort at Billingsport on the Delaware below Philadelphia. Two months later his regiment was ordered to Easton, Pa., where he joined Gen. Sullivan and took part in the hazardous expedition against the Six Nations, marching over the mountains and through the wilderness into Western New York. Having defeated the Indians and their Tory allies the expedition returned in October of 1779 to Easton. The next April brought the order which caused the rest of Capt. Craig's life to be identified with Pittsburgh and its vicinity. He was ordered in the spring of 1780 to Fort Pitt with a detachment of artillery and military stores, and arrived here on June 25th, and for the next forty-six years was never far away from this spot which became his home. The only expedition away from Fort Pitt which engaged him was the fruitless one planned by Gen. George Rogers Clarke against Detroit, then a British post, and a source of much annoyance to the men who were engaged in the winning of the West for the Colonies. Capt. Craig left Fort Pitt in the last days of July, 1781, went as far as the place of rendezvous, Louisville, then called "The Falls of the Ohio," and after the failure of Clarke's plans returned to Fort Pitt, undergoing great hardships on the journey, and arrived on November 26th, 1781, to find that in his absence he had been promoted to the rank of Major.

The Treaty of Peace between England and the United States of America was finally ratified in 1784, and Major Craig settled down to the pursuits of civil life. He formed a partnership with Col. Stephen Bayard, also a soldier of the American Revolution, and together they carried on a real estate and mercantile business. They bought the first ground that was sold within the limits of the present city of Pittsburgh, and were the pioneers in developing our great real estate interests. They purchased on the 22nd of January, 1784, from the Penns, four acres of land between Fort Pitt and the Allegheny river.

Major Craig was identified also with the early religious interests of the place where the fortunes of war had cast his lot. The Presbyterian congregation of the town of Pittsburgh was incorporated by an act of the Legislature of Pennsylvania in September, 1787, and Isaac Craig was one of the eleven trustees named in the act. It is noteworthy that, of the eleven, nine had been officers in the Revolutionary Army.

Although the war was over, the relations of Major Craig to the military service of the government did not cease. At the organization of the National Government under the Constitution, Gen. Henry Knox became the first Secretary of War, and in February, 1791, he offered the position of Quartermaster and Military Storekeeper at Pittsburgh to Major Craig, who had been under his command. It was by Major Craig's advice that in the same year old Fort Pitt was demolished, and on December 16th, three months after, he was directed by the War Department to procure materials for a block house, and picketed fort, to be erected in Pittsburgh in a position to cover the town, and protect the public stores. He built Fort Fayette at the corner of Penn avenue and Ninth street. It was completed in May, 1792.

When war was declared again with England, in 1812, Major Craig was an old man past seventy years of age, but his services were again sought for to prepare munitions of war for the army in the north-west. This was his last service to his country. When the war closed he removed to Neville Island, where his wife's father, Gen. Neville, had died, and there he breathed his last May 14th, 1826, aged 85 years.

It remains to mention still one other soldier of the American Revolution whose ashes we remove to-day. It is unfortunate that there are almost no records concerning this hero.

Col. James Johnston was a native Pennsylvanian. He was the fourth child of Alexander Johnston, Esq., of Chester county, Pennsylvania. He was born at New London Cross Roads, Chester county, on the 22d of June, 1758, and he died in the city of Allegheny, Pennsylvania, on the 19th of September, 1842. He was buried in the grave yard of the First Presbyterian Church of Pittsburgh. At the time of his death he was aged eighty-four years, two months and twenty-seven days.

The Revolutionary War broke out when he was but seventeen years old, and he entered the army with all the ardor of youth. At nineteen he was ensign and regimental paymaster in the Fifth Regiment of the Pennsylvania line, of which his brother Francis Johnston was the Colonel, and another brother, Alexander Johnston, was a captain of one of its companies. He also served, until near the close of the war, in the Ninth Regiment of the Pennsylvania line.

He was twice married. His first wife was Mary Kelso, to whom he was married in 1783. She was the daughter of Capt. John Kelso and Katherine Graham Kelso, his wife. Mrs. Johnston died in 1789, on the day after Christmas, in her twenty-eighth year. His second wife was a Miss Cathcart, who died only four months after her marriage. In 1798 Col. Johnston sold his estates in Chester county and removed to Pittsburgh, where the whole of the last half of his life was passed. He lived with his son, Alexander Johnston, Jr., in the residence part of the Bank of Pittsburgh, on the south west corner of Third and Market streets, of which bank Mr. Johnston was at that time the cashier.

In 1832 Mr. Alexander Johnston, Jr., died, and from that time until the time of his own death, in 1842, ten years later, Col. Johnston resided with his grandson, Mr. Robert Cassatt, at first in the house still standing on the east corner of Penn avenue and Fourth street, and afterward in the city of Allegheny, to which Mr. Cassatt removed.

There is still living a lady, far advanced in years, who remembers Col. Johnston well. This is Mrs. Sarah McCandless, the widow of Judge Wilson McCandless. To the President of the Society of the Sons of the American Revolution she said, "Col. Johnston was a familiar figure on the streets, known by all the children, and familiarly called 'old Col. Johnston.' He was a gentleman of leisure, and his manner of living indicated that he had retired from active life with sufficient means to feel comfortably independent. He was a genial old gentleman, who visited often at the houses of his acquaintances and was welcomed wherever he went."

Mrs. McCandless said also that on the occasion of Lafayette's visit to Pittsburgh, in 1824, Col. Johnston came to her mother's house, on the banks of the Monongahela river, between Ferry and West streets, to tell them that the General would stop there a few moments to see the house that had been the home of Col.

Pressly Neville, an aid-de-camp on his staff during the Revolution.

And so we say farewell once more to these great men of a bye-gone day. It is not too much to have spent the time we have taken to-day out of our busy lives to pay this tribute of respect to their memory. We owe to them our country and our opportunities. They could not foresee how mighty these would be. It remains for us, their descendants, to see to it that we never prove recreant to the great trust they left us. While the Republic shall last, the soldiers of the Army of the American Revolution must never be forgotten.

Address of Rev. Matthew B. Riddle, D.D., LL.D.

Representing the Daughters of the American Revolution.

THEY also serve who only stand and wait," much more they who only stand and weep. War is in many respects harder on women than on men. Some of those present can testify as to this from their own experience.

It is fitting then, in speaking to-day on behalf of the Daughters of the American Revolution that I should allude briefly to the peculiar hardships of the women during the Revolutionary period, before discharging this special duty of paying a tribute to the memory of one of them, whose remains are about to be consigned to another [and we trust, final] resting place.

In those early days the distances separating the soldiers and their families were often practically greater than from here to the Philippines. No roads in many cases, no regular mails for most of them; no trustworthy intelligence, save at very long intervals. How much of uncertainty and anxiety this implied in the homes of the soldiers! The women must wait, and weep while waiting; often to weep most bitterly when the waiting ended.

Then in their homes there were greater dangers and privations than in more later wars. In this region the Indians were still within striking distance. In the Susquehanna valley whole counties were deserted in consequence of threatened invasion by the red men. Some cases of peculiar danger and trial are well known to me. Very often all the adult male members of the family were absent on service, and added to the anxiety and uncertainty was unusual labor. The crops must be cared for; the little ones must be provided for; all this often in lonely cabins and sometimes in deep poverty. There were no such organized methods of helping the wives and mothers as existed in later wars. Nor should it be forgotten that the war lasted for eight years, that frequent levies of militia were made, so that unexpected partings as well as long separations occurred. We cannot honor the fortitude of these women too highly. Hence it is fitting that to the record of the Revolutionary heroes whose remains are now to be removed to the Allegheny Cemetery there should be added the record of the wife of one of them, not the least distinguished—a record moreover worthy of public attention in this community where her descendants have been numerous.

WINIFRED OLDHAM, daughter of John Oldham and Ann Conway, grand daughter of Col. Samuel Oldham, of Westmoreland Co., Va., and his wife Elizabeth, daughter of John Newton, son of Captain Willoughby Newton and Sarah Eskridge and great grand daughter of John Oldham, who came from England to Virginia in 1635.

Married at Winchester, Va., August, 1754, John Neville. She had six brothers who were officers in the Revolutionary War, one of whom was killed at Eutaw Springs. She married an officer, her sister married an officer, Maj. Abraham Kirkpatrick. Her one son was an officer, Colonel and aid-de-camp to General Lafayette, her only daughter married an officer, Maj. Isaac Craig. She died April 3rd, 1797. Her tombstone bears this inscription:

“ Beneath this stone are deposited the remains of Winney Neville
who was born Nov. 9th, 1736,
and died April 3rd, 1797,
aged 60 years, 4 mos. 14 days.

Here in just hope above this stone to rise
The mortal part of Winney Neville lies
In whom those beauties of a spotless mind
Faith and good works were happily combined.
A patient, careful, constant, loving wife,
The foe of scandal and domestic strife.
The tender mother, undissembling friend,
Who graced those virtues with a pious end.
Who still preserving an unblemished name,
Did never strive to taint a neighbor's fame.

Who played as all who live should do her part
With inward peace and rectitude of heart,
Who christian-like resigned her final breath
And dying free from censure smiled at death."

That these were her husband's real sentiments is indicated by the last will and testament of Gen. John Neville, made in 1801, in which he says:

My body I desire, if I should die in any place convenient to the tomb of my loving wife, to be buried by her side, "that in all humility praying that as we have lived in perfect unity and happiness, we may together have a part in the resurrection of the just."

To this may be added the statement that from the days of the Revolution until now, some of the descendants of Mrs. Neville have been in the Army or Navy, or in both. Surely as her remains are now to be removed to what may be the last resting place of the sacred dust, it is fitting to pay this public and special tribute to her memory.

Address of Rev. Maitland Alexander, D.D.

FOR more than a century the graveyard of this historic church has held the remains of many of those who, from this vicinity and others, gave their services, and in some instances their lives, to their country in her struggle for freedom. From time to time these remains have been removed to other places of burial by their descendants.

All that remain are about to be removed, and it seems fitting that as this is done, there should be a service of a memorial character in which we should refresh our minds concerning their deeds, and the place they occupy in the history of their country.

This parish of the old First Presbyterian Church can boast many of them as among its most staunch supporters, and among those who laid its first foundation. The list is long and a most illustrious one.

A short historical statement may not be out of place. On the 27th of March, 1769, the square between Wood Street, Smithfield Street, Sixth Street and Virgin Alley, was reserved for a graveyard. The Rev. Samuel Barr, Jno. Mather, Robt. Galbraith, Stephen Bayard, Alexander Fowler, George Wallace, David Duncan, Adamson Tannehill, John Gibson, Richard Butler and Isaac Craig were the Trustees of the property, names which we shall speak of in a moment, as honored names in both Church and State.

As far as the records can be authenticated, there are 26 names of which we must speak. The roll is as follows:

Col. John Gibson,
 Gen. James O'Hara,
 Capt. Jno. Wilkins,
 Gen. Wm. Butler,
 Col. Stephen Bayard,
 Col. James Johnson,
 Maj. Geo. McCully,

Maj. Isaac Craig,
 Maj. Wm. Anderson,
 Maj. Ebenezer Denny,
 Capt. Jno. Irwin,
 Capt. Sam'l Sample,
 Gen. Adamson Taunehill,
 Capt. Geo. Wallace,
 Capt. Thomas Hutchins,
 Capt. Deveraux Smith,
 Com. Joshua Barney,
 Capt. James Clow,
 Gen. John Neville,
 Col. John Wilkins, Jr.
 Capt. John Guthrie,
 Robt. Galbraith,
 Robt. Guthrie.

It is manifestly impossible that I should speak in detail of the services rendered by these men at the time of our country's greatest need. It is always the case that the greatest deeds of a nation's history are unwritten—that the greatest sacrifices have no record. All that we can do is to remember their records, and to realize that the bare details are but the boundaries within which their deeds of sacrifice and heroism are embodied.

Capt. John Irwin.

HEITMAN. OFFICERS OF THE ARMY OF THE REVOLUTION.

Irwin, John, Penn'a. Ensign 1st Continental Infantry, 1st January, 1776; 2nd Lieutenant August, 1776; Captain Lieutenant 2nd Penn'a 1st January, 1777. Capt. 16th May, 1779. Retired 1st January, 1781; died May 5th, 1808. Was Deputy Commissary General of issues at Pittsburgh in 1783.

PENN'A IN REVOLUTION. VOL. I, PAGES 406 AND 407.

Irwin, John, Captain 2nd Penn'a Continental Line; commissioned May 16th, 1780, vice Captain Jacob Ashmead, resigned. Commissary of Commanding General and staff at New Windsor, N. Y., in March, 1781.

Capt. John Irwin was born in Ireland in the year 1752, of Scotch parentage. His great grandfather, John Irwin, emigrated from Scotland in 1690 to volunteer in the cause of the Protestants under King William, fighting in the battle of the Boyne, July first of that year. The family settled at Donaghmore, County of Monaghan, where the succeeding two generations were born and whence John, afterwards Captain Irwin, emigrated to America.

Landing at Philadelphia in the year 1772 with a younger brother, James, then only nine years of age, the two worked there as carpenters until the breaking out of the Revolutionary War. John Irwin joined the First Pennsylvania Regiment with a commission as lieutenant, but was afterwards made captain of a company which he raised in Philadelphia and was known as Capt. John Irwin throughout the war. He was intelligent and a man of good education, and on many occasions he served as major or adjutant and in various other responsible positions. In January, 1777, his regiment was ordered to Quebec to reinforce Arnold. While there he underwent a severe illness resulting from the hardships of the campaign but, thanks to the care and attention of the Roman Catholic Sisters, he recovered his health. He then succeeded in persuading his nurse to forsake her religious vows and become his wife. It was on the retreat of Arnold's ill-fated expedition from Quebec that Captain Irwin lost the Bible containing many family records of great interest and value, including the record of his own birth, the exact date of which is now not known by his descendants. He continued with his regiment as adjutant and captain of a company until the unfortunate attack by the British troops under General Greig, at Paoli, on the night of September 20th, 1777. On the morning after the battle, or massacre, Captain Irwin was found on the field, supposedly dead, having been knocked down with the butt of a musket and received twenty-two bayonet wounds, but his life was wonderfully preserved by a book containing the regimental orders which, placed over his breast, prevented three distinct thrusts of the bayonet from penetrating the vital parts of the body. This field book, with its bayonet stabs, is an interesting and much-valued possession of the family of the late John Irwin, Jr., of Sewickley, Pa., a grandson of Captain Irwin.

After Paoli the wounded officer was given the best of care by order of General Washington, and in a short time was again fit for service, but for a time he was given easier duties at headquarters. When fully able to resume the field he received an appointment on the staff of General Washington, where he served until the end of the war, taking part in the Virginia campaign which culminated in the surrender of Cornwallis at Yorktown, in which crowning event of the Revolutionary War Captain Irwin was a participant.

The war over, he returned to Ireland, a widower, and in 1785 obtained in marriage the hand of Mary Pattison, a fair Cookstown, County Tyrone, girl whom he had met in Dublin, and who, when she had become his bride, said farewell to home and kindred and accompanied him to the land of his adoption.

They lived in Philadelphia for one year and from there removed to Chester County, Pennsylvania, in 1786, and a year later he brought his family to Pittsburgh, where he lived until the time of his death, which occurred on the 5th of May, 1808.

Col. John Irwin established a rope manufactory in 1794 on the property now occupied by the Monongahela House, Water and Smithfield Streets, Pittsburgh. The firm name was John Irwin and Wife. His wounds prevented his personal attention to the business, which was conducted by his wife and son.

John Irwin's name is recorded in the register of Pennsylvania officers of the Revolution as Captain John Irwin, and also in the list of members of the Society of the Cincinnati. The following is a notice of his death, copied from the Mercury of May 11th, 1808:

"DIED on Thursday last, the 5th inst., in the 56th year of his age, MAJOR JOHN IRWIN, for upwards of twenty years a respectable inhabitant of this borough. His remains were interred on Friday, in the First Presbyterian Church burying ground with military honors, by the Volunteer Corps, accompanied by the Masonic Lodge, of which he was a member, and a very large concourse of his fellow citizens. Major Irwin was a patriot of '76, and during the arduous struggle for liberty between this country and Great Britain he faithfully adhered to the cause of freedom, and after serving his country with uncommon reputation, as an officer, he retired to private life, respected and esteemed."

His body was afterwards removed from the First Presbyterian Church burying ground to the Allegheny Cemetery.

Over his grave, which is in Section 11, lot 40, 41, a commemorative stone has been placed by his descendants.

GEN. JOHN GIBSON was born at Lancaster, Pa., May 23, 1740. His first campaign was under General Forbes, in the expedition against Fort Duquesne, in 1758. He then settled at Pittsburgh as an Indian trader. In 1763 war broke out with the Indians, and Gibson, with two other men, was taken prisoner at the mouth of the Beaver River while descending the Ohio in a canoe.

One of the men was immediately tortured at the stake, and the other shared the same fate as soon as the party reached the Kanawha. Gibson, however, was preserved by an aged squaw, and adopted by her in place of a son who had been killed in battle. In 1764 he was given up by the Indians to Col. Boquet, when he again settled at Pittsburgh, resuming his occupation of trading with the Indians.

In 1774 Gibson acted a conspicuous part in the expedition against the Shawnees, under Lord Dunmore (Governor of Virginia). It was upon this occasion, near the waters of the Scioto River, in what is now Pickaway County, Ohio, that Logan, the Mingo chief, made to him the speech so celebrated in history.

Early in 1776 he entered the Continental service, rising, finally, to the command of the 13th Virginia Regiment, transferred from Valley Forge to Fort Pitt in the summer of 1778. He remained at the latter post until the close of the war, having been for a short time temporarily in chief command of the fort.

He made Allegheny County his home during the remainder of his life, serving in various positions of honor and trust. He was a member of the convention which framed the State constitution in 1790, and subsequently became one of the County Judges. He obtained the rank of a general by being promoted Major General of Militia.

In 1801 President Jefferson appointed him Secretary of the Territory of Indiana, which position he filled until the Territory became a State, of which he was acting Governor from 1811 to 1813.

He died at Braddock's Field April 16th, 1822, in the eighty-second year of his age, and is interred in Allegheny Cemetery.

STEPHEN BAYARD, Captain 2nd Penn'a Battalion 5th January, 1776; Major 8th Penn'a 12th March, 1777, to rank from 4th October, 1776; Lieutenant Col. 23rd September, 1777. Transferred to 6th Penn'a 17th January, 1781; transferred to 3rd Penn'a 1st January, 1783; served to 3rd November, 1783; Brevet Colonel 30th September, 1783.

Lieut. Col. Stephen Bayard was born in Maryland in 1748, belonged to a Huguenot family from Languedoc. He was brought up by his uncle, Col. John Bayard, of Philadelphia. He settled after the war in Pittsburgh, going into partnership with Maj. Isaac Craig. He retired from business in 1788, and settled on his lands on the Monongahela, fourteen miles above Pittsburgh, and laid out a town which he called Elizabeth, for his wife, who was a daughter of Col. Æneas Mackey, who had been an officer in the British army, and in 1754, in command of an independent company of King's soldiers from South Carolina, accompanied Washington on his first expedition, and afterwards became one of the King's justices of Westmoreland County. (Col. M.'s widow Mary was a Pennsylvania pensioner, and resided in Westmoreland County in 1784.—Editors). Col. Bayard desired to make "Elizabeth" a point for boat and ship building, and for that purpose brought out from Philadelphia a company of skilled ship builders, who built the first vessel launched on the waters of the Monongahela. In 1812 he was tendered a major general's commission in the army, but his bodily infirmities demanded that he should decline its acceptance. He died at Pittsburgh December 13th, 1815, aged sixty-seven, and was buried in the graveyard of the First Presbyterian Church.

GEORGE WALLACE, a soldier of the American Revolution, was one of the original Trustees of the First Presbyterian Church in 1787.

The Executive Council of Pennsylvania in 1788 appointed him President Judge of the first Court of Allegheny County. He was not a lawyer, but was a magistrate appointed originally for Westmoreland County. He was a large land holder, an excellent business man, and as a judge gave general satisfaction. He served as President Judge until 1791, at which time the new laws required the President Judge to be "learned in the law." From 1791 until his death, in 1814, he served as Associate Judge. He was buried in the graveyard of the First Presbyterian Church and reinterred in lot 129, section 2, in the Allegheny Cemetery.

When General Lafayette visited Pittsburgh in 1824, his cortege came down the Monongahela River from Elizabeth in barges, stopping over night at the mansion of Judge Wallace on the site of Braddock's defeat, where the committee from Pittsburgh met them next morning and escorted them to this city.

JOHN WILKINS, SR. Born in Donegal, Lancaster County, Pa., June 1st, 1738; died in Pittsburgh, Pa., 1808. Buried in the First Presbyterian Church graveyard.

In 1776 he was appointed Captain in Col. Spencer's Regiment, advancing the money from his private funds to equip his company, only a portion of which was afterwards refunded to him, and then in depreciated currency. After the Revolutionary War Mr. Wilkins was elected a member from Bedford County of the convention to frame the first State Constitution. He moved to Pittsburgh November 10th, 1783. He was instrumental in organizing the First Presbyterian Church here. "A log house of worship," the building of which he personally superintended after securing a charter and a deed from the Penns for lots for a graveyard and to build upon. He was ordained an Elder at the first establishment of the Church, and elected a Trustee, serving until his death. He was President of the Board of Trustees a great part of the time. Mr. Wilkins was appointed, at the organization of Allegheny County, a Justice of the Quarter Sessions and Common Pleas.

He was Chief Burgess of Pittsburgh after its incorporation, Treasurer of Allegheny County from 1794 to 1803, and also for the counties of Beaver, Mercer, Armstrong, Crawford, Warren, Erie and Venango.

JOHN WILKINS, JR. Born in Donegal, Lancaster County, Pa., December 23rd, 1761. Died in Pittsburgh, Pa., April 29th, 1816. He entered the army as Surgeon Mate in the company of his father, Capt. John Wilkins, Sr., at the age of 15 years, serving throughout the War of the Revolution. He settled in Pittsburgh after the war and was appointed by President Washington Quartermaster General of the United States Army, which position he held until his death, in 1816.

His wife was Catherine, daughter of Judge George Stevenson, of Carlisle, Pa., a prominent patriot during the Revolution.

General Wilkins and his wife were both buried in the First Presbyterian Church graveyard. Their remains, together with those of John Wilkins, Sr., were removed to Homewood Cemetery April 15th, 1882.

COL. RICHARD BUTLER was one of the original Trustees of the First Presbyterian Church, of Pittsburgh, in 1787.

Major of 8th Regiment Penn'a Line 20th July, 1776; Lieutenant Colonel 12th March, 1777, to rank from 28th September, 1776; Colonel of 9th Penn'a 7th June, 1777; transferred to 5th Penn'a 17th January, 1781; transferred to 3rd Penn'a 1st January, 1783, served to 3rd November, 1783; Brevet Brigadier General U. S. Levies in 1791.

Col. Richard Butler was the close second to and rival of the famous Col. Daniel Morgan at Saratoga. The second to Anthony Wayne in the desperate capture of Stony Point. Took an active part in suppressing the mutiny of the Pennsylvania soldiers in 1781. Was present and active at Yorktown, where his ensign, Ebenezer Denny, was detailed to plant the American flag over the town at its surrender, but General Steuben seized it from young Denny and placed it in position. For this Col. Butler sent Steuben a challenge, and it required the combined efforts of Washington and Rochambeau to prevent a duel between these two fighters.

Col. Butler, Oliver Wolcott and Arthur Lee were the Commissioners of the United States to negotiate a treaty with the "Six Nations" at Fort Stanwix (now Rome, N. Y.) in 1784.

He was killed in action November 4th, 1791, in St. Clair's defeat at Fort Recovery, Ohio. The last seen of him, he was wounded and leaning against a pile of flour with a loaded pistol in his hand.

CAPT. JOHN GUTHRIE. Born in Lancaster, Pa., January 11th, 1749; died in Pittsburgh, Pa., August 12th, 1832; buried in First Presbyterian Church Yard. He was a soldier of the Revolution. His early life was spent in Carlisle. He was a volunteer under General Armstrong in 1774, and again under General Lacey in 1776, in their campaigns on the Western frontier. After the Revolutionary War began, Guthrie joined the regiment of Col. Brodhead, known as the 8th Penn'a, serving throughout the war. He also served with distinction in the Border troubles in 1791.

A local paper, in a notice of his death, says: "He invariably sustained the character of a brave soldier and an honest man." He was buried with military honors.

ROBERT GUTHRIE was a brother of Capt. John Guthrie. He was also a soldier of the Revolution and later on the Frontier, where he was killed by the Indians in 1804. He was buried in the First Presbyterian Church Yard. He left no family.

ADAMSON TANNEHILL (Maryland), 2nd Lieutenant Stephenson's Maryland and Virginia Rifle Regiment, 11th July, 1776; 1st Lieutenant of Rowlings additional Continental Regiment, January, 1777. Captain 20th July, 1779, to rank from 1st April, 1778; retired 1st January, 1781; Brigadier-General Pennsylvania Volunteers in 1812; died 7th July, 1817; buried on his own property in Pittsburgh and re-interred in Lot 50, Section 2, owned by Col. James B. Morgan, Allegheny Cemetery, Pittsburgh.

In Cumin's "Sketches of a Tour," 1808, Pub. 1810 by Cramer, Spear & Eichbaum, Pittsburgh: "Grant's Hill is united to Quarry Hill by a plain, at first flat, then rising gradually, over the middle of which, on a very commanding situation, is seen the handsome cottage of Mr. Tannehill, a Continental Army Officer during the Revolutionary War, who now enjoys the evening of life in the shade of the finest fruit trees of this climate, of his own planting. What adds to the beauty of this seat is a handsome grove of about two acres of young black oaks, northwest of his dwelling, through the middle of which runs a long frame bowery, on whose end fronting the road is seen this motto: "1808. Dedicated to Virtue, Liberty and Independence." Here a portion of the Citizens meet on each 4th of July to hail with joyful heart the day that gave birth to the liberties and happiness of their Country. On the opposite side of the road to the bowery is a spring issuing from the side of the hill whose water trickles down through a rich clover patch through which is a deep hollow with several small cascades, overhanging with willow, and fruit trees of various kinds."

He was one of the original incorporators of the Bank of Pittsburgh, and an original trustee of the First Presbyterian Church in 1787.

Major Tannehill married Miss Heth of Virginia, whose father owned the land afterwards sold to Jacob Negley, and now occupied by Judge Mellon.

JAMES JOHNSTON, fourth child of Alexander Johnston, Esquire, of Chester County, Pennsylvania, by his wife Martha, was born at New London Cross-Roads, in that county, 22nd June, 1758, and died in Allegheny City, Penn'a, 19th September, 1842, and was buried in the graveyard of the First Presbyterian Church in Pittsburgh.

He was ensign and regimental paymaster in the 5th and 9th Pennsylvania Regiments of the Line January 1st, 1777, January 17th, 1781, of which his brother Francis was the colonel, and his brother Alexander was a captain.

He married first, circa 1783, Mary Kelso, daughter of Captain John and Katherine (Graham) Kelso. She died 26th December, 1789, in her 28th year. His second wife, Cathcart, died four months after her marriage. In 1798 he sold his landed estates in Chester County and removed to Pittsburgh.

Mrs. Sarah M'Candless, widow of Judge Wilson M'Candless, recollects Mr. Johnston as a gentleman of leisure who lived in a manner indicating that he had retired with sufficient means to feel comfortably independent. Among the children he was usually spoken of as "old Colonel Johnston."

The Colonel lived with his son Alexander Johnston, Jr., then Cashier of the Bank of Pittsburgh, in the residence part of the bank, south-west corner of Third and Market Streets.

After the death of his son in 1832, Col. Johnston lived with Mr. Robert Cassatt in the house which is yet on the east corner of Penn Avenue and Fourth Street.

Mr. Cassatt afterwards removed to Allegheny where Col. Johnston died in 1842.

She recollects him as a genial old gentleman who visited often at her mother's house and other residences and was welcomed wherever he went.

On the occasion of Lafayette's visit to Pittsburgh in 1824, she tells of Col. Johnston coming to their house on the bank of the Monongahela River, between Ferry and West Streets, ahead of the procession, to inform them that the General would stop there a few moments to see the house that had been the home of Col. Prestley Neville, an aid-de-camp on his staff during the Revolution.

Like the writer of the Epistle to the Hebrews, time would fail me to tell of the men who "subdued kingdoms, wrought righteousness, obtained promises, waxed valiant in fight, escaped the edge of the sword, out of weakness were made strong, and turned to flight the armies of the aliens."

It is in all respects fitting that these bodies should be laid in a permanent resting-place. After all, their deeds are imperishable, and their country has set her seal upon their devotion.

Report of the Ceremonies.

From the Pittsburgh Times of October 24th, 1902.

WHILE musketry and bugle notes woke the echoes from the surrounding hills, the bones of three Revolutionary heroes were yesterday afternoon interred in Allegheny Cemetery. Borne on the shoulders of boys five generations removed from the struggle for independence, the flag-covered caskets were carried to the graves, where after words of prayer and benediction had been said, three volleys were fired and taps were blown by members of the Third Regiment of the Boys' Brigade. With bowed heads members of the Sons and Daughters of the American Revolution stood in reverent silence during the rites and twilight was deepening before they were at an end.

The services at the cemetery were preceded by a memorial meeting in the First Presbyterian Church, Wood Street, and the afternoon will long be notable in the annals of patriotic display in Pittsburgh. The services at the church began at 2 o'clock. Fully 1,000 people were there, from white-haired men and women to boys and girls not wholly conscious of why they were present.

Within the altar stood the four flag-draped caskets containing the remains of Gen. John Neville, Maj. Isaac Craig, Col. James Johnston and Mrs. Winifred Neville. At either side of the pulpit were stands of flags, the National tri-color intertwined with the flags of the Sons and Daughters of the American Revolution. Before the caskets stood an honor guard from the Boys' Brigade of the Church of the Ascension, under command of Lieut. Howard Steen.

MUSIC WAS A FEATURE.

Rev. Maitland Alexander, D.D., pastor of the First Church, presided. With him in the pulpit were Rev. Richard S. Holmes, D.D., chaplain of the Pennsylvania Society S. A. R., and Rev. Matthew B. Riddle, D.D., L.L.D., of the Western Theological Seminary. Music was furnished by the First Church quartet, two anthems, "I Know That My Redeemer Liveth" and "The Day of Freedom," being finely rendered. Handel's "Largo" was the organ prelude. Dr. Holmes was the first speaker, eulogizing on behalf of the S. A. R. Gen. Neville, Col. Johnston and Maj. Craig. Dr. Riddle followed, speaking for the D. A. R. and taking the women of the Revolution as his theme, the memory of Mrs. Neville being the chief feature of his address.

Dr. Alexander was the third and last speaker, recounting vividly the deeds of valor and the later achievements of the 23 members of the First church who fought for independence. Of the 11 original trustees of the church nine were officers in the Continental army. Fifteen of them were buried in the church. Eight have already have been removed, three graves have been lost, and four are yet to be opened during the present month. In his peroration Dr. Alexander said :

AN APPEAL FOR PATRIOTISM.

"If there is one thing that we need more than another, if there is one thing more than another that this meeting should do this afternoon, it is the reviving and quickening of the spirit of patriotism in the men and women of America. Patriotism is not of war alone. It is not of battle alone. It should not need the sound of guns and the roar of cannon to be aroused. These men whose memory we honor to-day, how great and strong and splendid they were in the civic and ecclesiastic walks of life! Our hearts should be stirred with the patriotism that lives by the hour, the patriotism that stands for what is strong and true in our daily life."

In the moment of silence that followed Dr. Alexander's address Sergt. Howard Boas stepped within the altar inclosure and, raising his bugle to his lips, blew taps. The mellow notes in the strange surroundings formed a dramatic close to the service.

The members of the Boys' Brigade acted as pallbearers in the march from the church to the hearses and carriages on the street without. The march was made to the strains of Chopin's funeral march. Preceding the procession were the three speakers of the afternoon; William L. Jones, president of the Pennsylvania society, S. A. R.; R. W. Guthrie, J. C. Chaplin, F. G. Paulson, Thomas S. Brown and H. D. Sellers.

BOYS CARRIED THE CASKETS.

Then came the four caskets borne on the shoulders of lads whose youth lent strange emphasis to the years that had elapsed since the dead had been alive.

Six hearses and 18 carriages formed the procession from the church to the cemetery. Many made the journey in street cars and were well repaid, for the services there were even more beautiful than those in the church.

Three of the caskets were buried in the Craig plot in the northeastern corner of the cemetery. A simple granite shaft marks it and bears a brief inscription telling that here lies the body of Amelia Neville Craig. She was the daughter of Maj. Craig. By her side were interred the coffins of her father, grandfather and grandmother. The services at the grave were brief. While the caskets rested on the ground Dr. Riddle offered a short prayer and pronounced a benediction. Then as the coffins were lowered a squad fired three volleys and Sergt. Boas three times sounded taps.

BURIED ON THE OTHER SIDE.

Col. Johnston's body was buried far on the other side of the cemetery, close to the Penn avenue entrance. Beside him were placed the bodies of his son, Alexander Johnston, Jr., and the latter's wife, Mrs. Mary Johnston. Dr. Alexander made the prayer and pronounced the benediction there, and three more volleys were fired and taps again sounded. It was after 5 o'clock when the last rite was performed.

The movement of the procession from the church to the cemetery attracted great attention. Thousands stopped to view it, and it was perhaps one of the most remarkable that ever traversed the city streets. Six hearses in one procession is a sight seldom seen, and the general knowledge of the circumstances that occasioned it made many a man bare his head while the cortege passed.

In the crowd that took in the services at the cemetery and at the church were many in whose veins flowed the blood of the men who were honored. Among these was Robert K. Cassatt, whose father, President Alexander Johnston Cassatt, of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, is a great grand-son of Col. James Johnston. Mr. Cassatt's wife accompanied him and took a deep interest in the exercises, being herself a member of the D. A. R. Mr. and Mrs. Cassatt are guests of Robert Pitcairn.

Address of General A. W. Greeley, U. S. A.

(District of Columbia Society, S. A. R.)

Before the Pennsylvania Society of Sons of the American Revolution, at its First Annual Meeting, February 22nd, 1894.

R. President, Members of the Society of the Sons of the American Revolution and Gentlemen :

Many are prone to associate or restrict Pennsylvania patriotism to Philadelphia and the Liberty Bell, but in establishing this representative society of the Keystone State you men of Pittsburg have again demonstrated that "Westward the Star of Empire takes its way." Honored indeed are these associations of Philadelphia with the Revolution, but when with peals of joyful sound the Liberty Bell gave token of the birth of a new nation, it proclaimed freedom to all the land, and the large and distinguished assemblage here to-night indicates that its echoes are resounding still and that your hearts are attuned to its memorable sound.

What more appropriate home than the historic city of Pittsburg is possible for a society which adheres to the patriotic utterances of Washington's farewell address? Here that young American gave evidence of the sagacity and ability that caused his selection as Commander of the Revolutionary forces. Here, later, Washington's valor placed him in the advance that occupied Fort Duquesne, and destroyed forever the success of Iberville's sagacious scheme that looked to the restriction of English colonies to the Atlantic coast by an encircling line of French outposts. Thank God for the valor of Washington and his colonist comrades here displayed ; for the continued occupancy of Fort Duquesne by France, with the vicious Louis and shameless Pompadour as rulers, would have marred the future of America and retarded for ages the progress of civil rights and political freedom Again Pittsburgh was inspired with that spirit of noble discontent which culminated in the conquest through George Roger Clark of the great Northwest territory. This gave the United States its foothold in the Mississippi valley, established its claim to the upper lakes, insured the later extension of our domain to one of trans-continental area and inspired the doctrine of manifest destiny, America for Americans.

The revolutionary patriots, men though they were of heroic mould and sagacious minds, built far better than they knew, and the more that this and kindred societies study their lives and their actions, the more the world wonders at the wide import of their glorious deeds.

It is not my purpose to set forth the deeds of men of a century since, but rather to dwell upon the duties of the present and the possibilities of the coming time, and see how in dealing with them we may best prove our right to be called loyal and worthy Sons of the American Revolution. As regards our revolutionary ancestors we can not surpass them in courage, virtue or patriotism, but we can do as they did, our very best. As the widened resources of this time give greater personal possibilities, so let us look to it that our best shall be better than theirs. Our ancestors dealt, as we may say, with local matters only, while to us is in a manner left the solution of the various industrial and social problems that involve the future welfare of the world. They fanned into a spark of flame the spirit of human freedom lighted for America alone, but it is for us to control the fierce flames of modern progress that they destroy not the entire social fabric of the human race. The American Revolution was especially an era of limitations; then obtained the tedious length of time, the weary space of distance which hampered and narrowed the faculties of man in every conceivable manner. India was then a name, Africa covered with the fabled mountains of the moon, the Siberian plains identified with the Khengis Khan rather than with commercial interests. Even in America there was but a fringe of settlements along the Atlantic sea-board; the rest a primeval forest, an untrodden land save to a few adventurous frontiersmen, who from this very spot dared to voyage to the Ultima-thule of America, on hazardous journeys southward to the Gulf and northward to the Falls of St. Anthony. The greater portion of these United States, the trans-Mississippi region, was absolutely unknown, and the vaunted efforts at that time of one Jonathan Carver on an expedition to the Pacific was looked on as the vagaries of a madman, which evoked adverse criticism from his scientific friends who thought him sane on all else but in this dream.

As late as 1781 Dr. Lettsom wrote: "He suggested an attempt by land across the northwest parts of America, and actually drew a chart of his proposed route for effecting his project, which, however visionary it may now be deemed, affords at least a proof of the enterprising spirit of Carver."

Think what great changes have swept over the world since that day; space and time practically annihilated, the universe explored and the great forces of nature so fully under man's control, that whereas the work of man and beast to nature was then as a hundred to one, it is now safe to say that it is now one to a hundred. It is a wonderful tale which need not be rehearsed in this industrial city of Pittsburgh which is itself a crystallization of all that is wonderful in invention, development and perfection of modern industries, incident to the change from the manual labor of quantity to the dextrous labor of quality that manipulates the thousand wondrous machines of to-day. It is the advance from the pine knot to natural gas; from tallow dip to the electric light; from the occasional news-letter with intelligence months old to the newspaper that gives the world's history of yesterday; from the chaise to the Pullman car; from the plodding mail-carrier to the postal railway; from the log cabin to the modern palace like that of the Duquesne Club; from tiny shallops to the palatial ocean propellers. Then hardy mariners scoured the distant main for scanty oil which now gushes in millions of gallons from the earth. The eye of man which saw hardly a third of the earth's element now notes with spectroscopic aid the constituents of the most distant planet; the human voice which could scarcely reach across the narrower of your twin rivers now sounds distinctly at the distance of a thousand miles, and tidings of ship or friend which then came from the antipodes in half a year is dropped on your table in a half hour.

In all these marvels of industrial initiation, growth and evolution, America has contributed in a degree unapproached by any other nation, and in the march, Pittsburgh has always been found in the advance. Then the interests of America stood alone, touched only at isolated points those of mother England and capricious France. Now the world stands or falls together; its commercial, and we may say almost its social interests, so inextricably interlaced that the industrial prosperity of the nations highest in the scale of civilization hangs on nations barbaric or semi-barbaric, which our forefathers thought, if they thought at all, only as fit subjects for proselyting. Witness the founding of the Congo Free State; in 1877 the existence of the region and its inhabitants unknown to the world; five years later, fourteen nations, of which the United States was one, defining its limits, guaranteeing its commercial freedom and welcoming it into the community of nations. Again note the half-mestizo Argentine Republic, whose commercial interests pulled down the great house of Barings, and disarranged the financial conditions of the world. Instance also the beginning of the financial depression which now hangs like a deep pall over us all. One week a series of boastful speeches of a kind familiar to you, setting forth the entire independence of the United States of other nations, and hardly had the vibrating echoes of sonorous speech died upon our ear when a brief message sped under the sea and across lands, saying that only yesterday in the council board of heathen India an order had passed closing its mints to silver. Despite the boastful speeches, the industrial and financial interests of the United States were substantially paralyzed, within a week half its silver mines were closed for years to come, thousands of business men faced financial ruin, and workmen by tens of thousands clamored in vain for that toil which should insure their daily bread.

Whether art, commerce, education or any other factor of modern civilization is in question, the progress of the United States in its 118 years challenges comparison. We pride ourselves justly on vast wealth, improved lands, speedy transportation, an inventive genius that has enriched humanity, an unequalled individual munificence for charitable, educational and religious purposes, and a spirit of humanity that strives earnestly for the advancement of the race.

As a people we have grown from less than three to sixty-four millions, and our national domain has increased from eight hundred thousand to thirty-eight hundred thousand square miles. But not alone in increase of population and by extension of domain, have we become a nation. Circumstances made us independent and self-reliant in colonial days, and out of the frequent Indian wars and our struggles with Great Britain and Mexico came the feeling that the confederacy, bound together in its early days as by a rope of sand, was slowly developing into a great people. These experiences with those connected with the peaceful conquest of the great west, while serving to give individuality and self-confidence to the States, yet only in part fashioned us into typical patriotic citizens. Our character-building experiences were completed by the fiery struggle of the civil war, a war that cost millions of treasure and shortened hundreds of thousands of lives ; but it was worth more than it cost, since it welded into an indissoluble nation of freemen a confederacy of states, struggling with each other and with their millions of bondsmen.

Yes, we feel that the war was good, and the poet, as does the true poet ever, put in words our unshaped thought when he said :

“ And blessings on the falling out
That all the more endears,
When we fall out with those we love
And kiss again with tears.”

Not alone in material interests and in moral reforms have we advanced, but also in art and literature. The philosophy of an Emerson, the subtle humor of a Holmes, the polished essays of a Lowell, the rhythmic strains of a Longfellow, the weird beauty of a Hawthorne take the sting from the query : “ Who reads an American book ? ” In art such has been our progress that a great French artist, who came with frankly confessed belief that democracy, the slave of utility, could not create an ideal, found that in the city which is held to be the personification of implacable utilitarianism the dominating element had known how to justify the dictum of Emerson that “ Beauty, convenience, grandeur of thought are as near to Americans as to any.” Bourget with wondrous surprise looked, and on departing said : “ In spite of the moral and mental transformation the human heart is undergoing, it need not fear for its most precious gems. The delightful grace of the White City proves that democracy is not incapable or conceiving, loving, creating an ideal.”

In this great evolution of modern industrial methods of civilization, an evolution which owes its extent more largely to ideas of American freedom than to any other source, the true Sons of the American Revolution have done well their part, and now what purpose in end have you men of the Pennsylvania Society of the Sons of the American Revolution? Nature's laws are inexorable; it is either progress or retrogression, and it is for you, and men like you, to say which it shall be.

There is no need of urging on the members of this Society the importance of patriotism and love of country or pride in its achievements, be they either mental or moral; but to think and theorize on these lines is not Americanism, for of all things we pride ourselves not so much on the idea as its elaboration and perfection. Your coming together in an association like this indicates you have the true spirit of the day, that every citizen owes part of his time to the general public.

To-day more than ever we owe a debt to our fellows, sympathetically as human beings, socially as neighbors, politically as citizens and religiously as christians. Whoever selfishly enjoys the rich fruitage of modern civilization without putting his shoulder to the wheel of progress, is in effect a parasite.

The first great and patriotic duty of Americans is attention to matters of public weal. It is easy to die for one's country, as its selected and accredited representative, but it is hard to live for it in the small duties of successive days. The common dust and daily heat of the endless road overcome us before the battle is fought.

Many of us live in ideals, striving in sympathetic thought with the creations of fiction, failing to realize the greater field which is under our hand in the social, moral or political conditions of our town or state. Is it not needful that we persevere and be faithful in the little things of every day, or, when occasion demands, be impressed with a noble anxiety as to the outcome of perturbed conditions which involve the whole nation, now as to finance, again as to other phases of political economy, or of some moral vital import? Is it not true that this is becoming less and less a government of the American people, by the American people and for the American people? And by the American people I mean all those who have the love of civic, religious and political freedom in their hearts.

In this time, as against the old, are not trusts, corporations and monopolies more powerful; justice less sure and speedy; officials more prone to think themselves above the law; the demands of labor-unions and trade-assemblies less reasonable; the rights of person and property more frequently violated? Is not an avoidance of the obligations of citizenship a characteristic of the more intelligent Americans of to-day? What follows from the absence of earnest, thoughtful men from these duties, if it be not narrow, harmful parsimony here, wasteful dominating rings there, and everywhere increased burdens, inefficient administration and general neglect of suitable methods for fostering public prosperity?

If narrowness and error abide in the creeds of churches; if harmful methods of extending charity obtain; if an unsuitable educational system remains; if pernicious and destructive doctrines are preached; if so called moral institutions undermine the adult and corrupt the youth; if any wicked tendency be permitted by your supineness to flourish unchecked—it is because your community fails in its patriotic duties; and thereto, in all proper and suitable ways, your influence and labors should be devoted.

It is recognized that this is an age of work, but there are limitations of effort even for the most energetic, and limitations of time even for the leisure class; hence the necessity of undertaking practical work along progressive lines, by approved methods conforming to the age.

One of the most serious dangers of the times, which it is the work of patriotic associations to overcome, lies in the unsuitable immigration of late years. The immigration from 1881 to 1890 aggregated five and a quarter millions, the quality being lower than ever before regarding wealth, education and morality. Worse than this, there has been added a most unwelcome element, objectional nationalities of illiterate condition and having characteristics which makes their speedy assimilation most doubtful. Of this class there came in our hour of peril, 1861-1870, twenty-four thousand, while in prosperity, 1881 to 1890, nearly nine hundred thousand. This flood of immigration, says Mr. Gannet, has lowered the general intelligence and morality of the community. He adds that the proportion of illiterateness among the foreign-born is four times as great and of criminal twice as great as among the native born.

In a way it is fortunate that these elements have settled in our cities where they are more easily watched, controlled and elevated. It is yet more fortunate that the headwork of the country is almost as fully done by native Americans as a century ago, and to the maintenance of trained minds and skilled hands of our native born we may turn as one method of insuring for the future that supremacy which our ancestors left us as one of their many valuable legacies.

The danger from monopoly of offices by the foreign born appears to have been exaggerated. It is safe to say that the direction of national affairs not only rests, but will always do so, in American hands. None of the Justices of the Supreme Court and only two of the eighty-five Senators are non-Americans by birth, and but eighteen of the three hundred and forty-five Representatives, being only four per cent., while those of foreign birth number fifteen per cent. of the entire population. It is needless to say that this small percentage of foreign born citizens in Congress contain representatives unsurpassed by any of their fellows in liberality of thought, love of freedom and devotion to American institutions, qualifications which mark the man whom we call the American.

Another reported danger, overrated in my opinion, lies in the one per cent. of American citizens whose wealth equals that of the other ninety-nine per cent.; a class described by violent critics as corrupt, ostentatious, selfish, without honor, devoid of patriotic feelings and strangers to high and noble aim. While such statements are a libel of American plutocrats, who number among them men as noble, humane and sympathetic as any of their kind, yet the dangers from vast wealth distributed most unequally demand thoughtful consideration. We can hardly call this one percentum a class, certainly not a coherent class, and, in any event, safety lies in two directions; first, in the truth of the dictum that in America it is only three generations from shirt-sleeves to shirt-sleeves; and secondly, in the resolute common sense manner in which the typical American deals with such problems when they become a menace to the country. It is the business class which really dominates every country and if in America it devotes its energy in an unequal degree to acquiring fortunes, it does not follow that its intellectual activities are so absorbed in this direction as to allow a plutocracy to dominate their lives and destroy their interests. In this connection it is important to recall that the American Revolution established once for all that man, individual man, is the true social and political unit. The rights of the world are no greater than those of any single man, and this axiom combined with a sister truth,—that the liberty of one man ends where it begins to infringe on the liberty of another,—are the safe corner-stones of American government.

Who can fortell the wonders of the coming twentieth century? We only believe that it will be as much beyond the nineteenth as our day is beyond that of our Revolutionary ancestors. As the earth is man's so the best thought of that new age will be for the amelioration of human existence. Universal civilization is not simply a hope or a dream, but in the light of modern science is an evident possibility. Religion is becoming less theological and more practical, certainly among the Anglo-Saxons. The insane, the sick, the pauper find help now that was universally denied a century since, and when the genius of devouring labor turns its efforts from material interests to moral improvement, and the extension of the Golden Rule, may we not expect in that field also a modicum of the success that has ever attended us?

The question of classes appears to be unduly thrust upon the public stage. From the nature of the case there always has been and always will be classes; partly from interest, partly from choice. The vicious and virtuous, the educated and ignorant, the bigoted and the liberal minded, the artistic and the utilitarian naturally affiliate with their own and shun their opposites. Politics and religion have been singularly ineffectual, and we pray God they may ever be so, in building up class distinction in America. A certain type of practical politicians, however, is striving to cultivate the idea that distinctions of wealth and differences of occupation necessarily restrict the laborer and the capitalist, the trader and the transporter, to such continual and intimate association with those of kindred employment or equal wealth as to make them distinct classes. The attempt has so far failed, save to emphasize the material contrast between the very wealthy and the very poor, and between the masters of great industrial establishments and the day-laborers under them.

This idea of antagonistic capital and labor can not but be harmful to the entire country, and every man who does his best to relieve the somewhat strained relations between the twain is doing a public good, for it is acknowledged that the present industrial conditions of the world have brought about an anomalous state of feeling, which may perhaps be called by extremists a crisis in modern civilization.

Every thoughtful and sensible man realizes that the interests of the capitalist and laboring man are identical, a truth which some capitalists and some laborers admit, and which it is to be hoped particularly on the part of the capitalist, may bear seasonable fruit. The grave social problem of to-day can be solved only by the exercise to an extraordinary degree, of abnegation, charity and patience, coupled with wisdom and consideration. Such great and pressing problems naturally present different phases to different minds, and in concerted action for industrial relief it will require the wisest and clearest leader to assimilate and utilize the clashing energies of co-operating humanitarians.

I am not unmindful that I am speaking in a city which is reputed to be doing more to justify democracy from a humanitarian standpoint than any other industrial centre of the world. Here I am told theological discussions are abandoned by all religious bodies for the moment in a generous rivalry to improve the moral and material interests of the unfortunate. Further, that both city officials and generous hearted individuals are bending their energies to furnish even, at a temporary financial loss, work for the unemployed, so as to tide over the emergencies.

As the utilitarian city of Chicago raised up to the gaze of the astonished world an artistic ideal of unequalled excellence, so the iron city of Pittsburgh, with its abounding wealth of commiserating human hearts, is thus erecting an enduring monument to the humanity of democracy. And so as your fore-fathers turned back the tide of French aggression, successfully defied British tyranny and laid deep and secure the foundations of civil freedom and personal rights, you the later Sons of the American Revolution are doing, and must continue to do, your part to justify the immortal words of Abraham Lincoln uttered on Pennsylvania soil that "this government of the people, by the people and for the people shall not perish from the face of the earth."

WILLIAM WILSON. Born Pennsylvania, ———; died Maryland, ———. In June, 1776, as Agent of the Continental Congress, he was entrusted with the mission of proceeding from Ft. Pitt through the hostile wilderness to the British Military Post of Ft. Detroit, to induce the several Indian tribes to leave Ft. Detroit, without making a treaty with the British, and to journey to Ft. Pitt and there make a treaty with the representatives of the Continental Congress. Gov. Hamilton, the British Commandant, had offered reward for the scalp of every patriotic American settler, and had influenced the Indians against the American cause. But William Wilson, by his influence with the Indians, averted these atrocities, induced the Chiefs to leave Ft. Detroit and come to Ft. Pitt, where they made a treaty with the Congress. His success prevented a bloody war on the defenceless border at a time when such a one would have been a serious blow to the cause of American Independence.

At the outbreak of the Revolution, Spring of 1775, elected Captain of volunteer military company then forming, and in the Autumn of 1776 was appointed by the Legislature, Colonel of 2nd Battalion Cumberland County, (N. J.) Militia. November 27, 1776, was in like manner appointed Colonel of a Battalion of State Troops. Though appointed and acting as Colonel in '76, his commission, as is shown by that of his Lieut. Col. (Col. Potter's Commission having been destroyed by the enemy when he was captured) appears not to have been issued until April 12, 1777. February 21, 1777, appointed by the Legislature to be Brigadier General, but declined the office, still retaining his colonelcy and continued in service. September 20, 1777, he was directed by Gov. Wm. Livingston of New Jersey to take command of a brigade at Woodbury in "opposing the progress of the enemy toward Philadelphia." Col. Potter was taken prisoner in this campaign, either at the Battle of Germantown, or in some of the skirmishes preceding it. JOSIAH PHILLIPS. Born Wales, (Pembrokeshire), March 29, 1751; died Chester County, Pa., March 1, 1817. The said Josiah Phillips, with his three brothers, viz: David Phillips, John Phillips and Joseph Phillips, comprised the officers of the Second Company, Seventh Battalion, Chester County, Penn'a Militia, their commissions dating from May 5, 1777. The said David Phillips being Captain, John Phillips First Lieut., JOSIAH PHILLIPS Second Lieut., and Joseph Phillips, Ensign.

Owing to the invasion of Chester County, Pa., during that year and the occupation of Philadelphia by the British, the Militia of that County were almost constantly under arms. By reason of their location the Militia were present at the battles of Brandywine and Germantown, and actions at Chestnut Hill and other points, and were encamped and in active service along the Schuylkill river, and at various defences established to guard the Delaware and Chesapeake shores.

JOHN GUTHRIE. Born Lancaster, Pa., January 11, 1749; died Pittsburgh, Pa., August 12, 1832. While living in Carlisle, Pa., served in frontier campaigns against the Indians prior to the Revolution. Enlisted in 8th Penn'a Regiment under Colonel Daniel Brodhead on its organization, serving through the grades of Ensign, Lieutenant and Captain, until close of the Revolution. Was one of the first officers nominated by President Washington, and confirmed by the U. S. Senate, March 6, 1792, as Captain in the New Army. The President in his letter names Capt. Guthrie as having "previously served with reputation." This appointment Capt. Guthrie declined. The history of the 8th Penn'a Regiment is well known; its remarkable march from Fort Pitt to New Jersey in midwinter of 1777-78 was unsurpassed. Capt. Guthrie served through all the campaigns of the Regiment.

JOHN PERKINS.

JOHN PERKINS. Born Connecticut ———; died Wyoming Valley, Pa., July 6, 1777. One of the forty-six earliest settlers of Wyoming Valley, then claimed by Connecticut. Enlisted in Capt. Spalding's Company, Wyoming, Pa., January 1, 1777. Killed by Indians July 6, 1777, in Massacre of Wyoming, the day after the battle at Forty Fort.

The Ferriers were an old Colonial family from Orange County, N. Y., but no record is at hand of their services.

Jonathan Hancock came to Wyoming Valley directly after the massacre from the Eastern Shore of Maryland where the records of Virginia and Maryland show that his ancestors must have settled in the 17th century. Owing to destruction by fire of records at Wilkesbarre, where he settled and died, his genealogy is not accurately traced, but no doubt he or his father were in the War, as he was an enthusiastic patriot. His wife belonged to an old ante-revolutionary family named Young, from Dauphin County, Pa.

The last two paragraphs are written in the hope that they may meet the eye of some person interested, and thus enable Mr. Hancock to secure, and possibly to give, further light.

GEN. JABEZ HUNTINGTON. Born Norwich, Conn., August 7, 1719; died same place, October 5, 1786. In May, 1775, the Hon. Jabez Huntington was one of nine persons forming the "Council of Safety," appointed to aid the Governor in the recess of the Assembly. Was one of the wealthiest men in Norwich, but in 1774 called his family together and told them in few words that if they espoused the cause of the colonists they would probably lose everything. Willingly they agreed to devote themselves and all they had to this great cause. In 1776 was appointed one of two Major Generals from Connecticut, and on the death of Gen. David Wooster (the 2d general) was appointed Major General over the entire Connecticut Militia, and though he never took the field himself in actual service, yet the exertions he made for his country destroyed his health, and nearly all his property. His four sons were all in actual service, two of them Major Generals, one a Colonel; one, ANDREW HUNTINGTON (great-grandfather of applicant) being Brigade Commissary, upon whose services Gov. Trumbull put great reliance. The historian adds: "If the annals of the Revolution record the name of any family which contributed more to that great struggle, I have yet to learn it."

J., in 1775; Major in Colonel Reed's Battalion of State Troops; Lieutenant Colonel of 4th Regiment of Hunterdon State Troops, in 1777; and subsequently the Colonel of another regiment which was enlisted from the Counties of Hunterdon and Burlington to serve for the War. Colonel Taylor crossed the Delaware at Trenton with General Washington, December 25, 1776, participated with him in the victory at Princeton, and shared the hardships of the winter that followed. His regiment took an active part in the battles of Germantown, Connecticut Farms and Somerset Courthouse, and formed a portion of the small force of 1500 men with which Washington performed the feat of keeping many thousand British Troops pent up in New Brunswick for more than a year. In 1778 his regiment performed efficient service under General Maxwell in the battle of Monmouth, resulting in an expulsion of the British from New Jersey. During a sally against the enemy from New Brunswick, Colonel Taylor was taken prisoner and confined temporarily in the Presbyterian Church, but was relieved by Capt. Adam Huyler, of the Schooner "Revenge." Acted as Major and Aide-de-Camp to Maj. Gen. Philemon Dickinson at the battle of Monmouth, June 28, 1778.

Addenda to Roll of Members.

It was decided at first to include in this book the membership up to November 1, 1903. Hence the statistics of page 34. When 216 pages had been printed the Board of Management thought it best to include all members to date of issue. Those who have joined since November 1, 1903, whose initial letter would permit, have been placed in alphabetic order. The others will be found below. This will add 10 to the figures 423, 448 and 406, on page 34; one must be added to the 21 deaths and subtracted from the total "active members enrolled", making 415 active members at the printing of the book, February 1, 1904.

The lack of State and National Numbers is explained by the above facts.

 MAJOR ISAAC SADLER.....Jennie Hunt.

MAJOR ISAAC SADLER was born at Carlisle, Pa., May 14, 1760; died in Westmoreland County, June 20, 1843. Enlisted about September 1, 1775, at Carlisle, Pa., in Company commanded by Captain Stephenson, Colonel McGaw's Regiment; marched to Little York, thence to Trenton, New Jersey. Honorably discharged at Trenton, New Jersey. Term of service, one year. Re-enlisted September 13, 1777, in Captain Stephenson's Company, Major Mull's Battalion of York County Volunteers, and marched to York, Pa., where Major Mull resigned and Isaac Sadler was elected and commissioned Major; thence marched to Brandywine. Afterwards, about October 12, 1777, his command returned to York County and was disbanded. Pensioned.

In Memoriam.
